Washington's Day. Have We Outgrown Him? An English Tribute. They Pulled Her Head Off.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WASHINGTON'S Birthday reminds us that we have grown too wise to need his advice. He urged us to keep out of European entanglements.

Uncle Sam is in Europe's affairs now up to his armpits.

He will soon be in the world court.

He submits to England humble requests that he be allowed to build certain ships, and England says no.

Even now America is considering an agreement under which we should be obliged to defend France in case she were attacked by some European enemy.

Soon we shall have foreign judges of the world court giving us orders.

WASHINGTON used to speak his mind plainly. His commanding officer, Braddock, was killed near what is now Pittsburgh because he foolishly despised French and Indian fighters, engaging them in the forest with English "Regulars."

Washington, who got four bullets in his coat, wrote soon after the battle:

"The dastardly behavior of those they called regulars exposed all others to almost certain death, and at last they ran, as sheep pursued by dogs."

WHAT would Washington say to American leaders now forfeiting the independece which he won, submitting to British approval our right to adequate national defense?

He might well put his comment in few words, as:

"Are you bought, or are you cowards, that you cannot do with 120,000,000 men what I did with fewer than 4,000,000 men?"

THE truthful answer would be, "A little of both—something of the coward and some indirect buying, by international bankers."

IT IS customary to eulogize Washington on his birthday and forget him between birthdays.

Washington being out of fashion among modern American "statesmen," let us borrow praise of him from an Englishman.

Lord Brougham, one of the most brilliant orators, scientists and statesmen of the last century, wrote:

"How grateful the relief which the friend of mankind, the lover of virtue, when, turning from the contemplation of such a character (Napolen), his eye rests upon the greatest man of our own or of any age! It will be the duty of the historian and the sage, in all ages, to omit no occasion of commemorating this illustrious man; and until time shall be no more, will a test of the progress which our race has made in wisdom and virtue be derived from the veneration paid to the immortal name of Washington."

THAT is what you might call a tribute.

If the British had in their history such a man as Washington, they would not scorn his advice. Even without him, they know enough to manage their own affairs and do not come truckling to us, asking permission to build a ship.

They leave that to modern soft-soap American imitations of Washington. It is almost enough to make you think it was Washington's English blood, not his American birth, training and surroundings, that made him what he was.

APART from all that, there is, with one exception, nothing in the news to interfere with your enjoyment of a Washington holiday in a land that thinks it has outgrown Washington.

JUST one piece of news makes unpleasant reading. Mrs. Dugan not long ago killed an Arizona rancher. He was rather old. The defense said he was given to change and planned to put Mrs. Dugan off his ranch, bringing in a younger woman, from Phoenix.

Women are touchy about such things, especially as the years creep on. Mrs. Dugan killed him.

YESTERDAY Arizona killed her. She was hanged, and with the rope around her neck, smiled and shook hands with those about to kill her.

It was not a neat job, the rope pulled her head from her body.

You could say for the woman that jealousy and rage probably made her mentally irresponsible.

What can you say for the "civilization" that choked her, and pulled off her head?

MR. COOLIDGE, invited by William Wrigley (guess what industry he controls) is exploring Catalina Island.

He will see big fish in the sea, including barracuda that would bite your leg off. On high mountains are wild goats, planted there by Spaniards long ago. Norris, LaFollette and Borah would seem tame, compared with them.

And there is gold in those hills, also silver and copper.

PRESIDENT HOOVER invites Mr. Coolidge to act as sponsor at the inauguration of the Coolidge Dam. Very graceful.

LORD WESTBURY jumped out of the window and killed himself in London yesterday. His son and heir was

4 Die in Edenburg Station Blast

Three Shot, 40 Routed By Firebug

BOY VICTIMS BELIEVED LOOTERS

Killed by Explosion While Stealing Stored Gasoline, Police Authorities Say

International News Service.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Four youths, believed by police to have been stealing gasoline stored in the abandoned Pennsylvania Railroad station at Edenburg, near here, were killed instantly today in an explosion that demolished the old structure or were burned to death in the fire that followed the blast.

Positive identication of the charred bodies of the boys was impossible but authorities believe the victims were four Edenburg youths who have been reporced missing. The missing youths were:

Dominick Zarello, 18; his brother, Louis, 21; Sam Retort, 20, and the latter's brother, Nick Retort, 19.

Felix Zarello, 24, of Youngstown, O., brother of the two boys belived to have met death in the blazing structure, escaped a like fate.

The elder Zarrello, accompanying the missing youths on an automobile trip from Youngstown to Edensburg, left the party at Hillsvile, his destination.

An automobile found parked near the blazing station gave police their first clue to the identity of the victims. A driver's card, issued to Dominick Zarrello, was found in a side pocket of the card and a checkup with relatives revealed the four boys were missing.

GASOLINE STORED

The abandoned station was used by the Pennsylvania Railroad for storage of gasoline. Officials said the youths were violating a no-trespass rule of the road and apparently had entered the storage house to pilfer gasoline.

The entire countryside was shaken by the concussion when the blast let go. Police believe one of the youths had carelessly dropped a lighted cigaret near the gasoline tank.

3 SHOT AT AIRPORT FIRE

Forty Workers Routed as Incendiary Sets Fire to Dwelling; Posse Searches

Posses today had not found the gunman who shot down three of 40 workmen, occupants of a frame dwelling on the Robert Rath farm, off the Lebanon Church road, a short distance from the new City-County airport, after firing the building.

The building was destroyed at a loss of $10,000 and in addition $2,500 in currency, the savings of the workmen, was destroyed.

More than 20 of the men were asleep on the first and second floors of the structure when the flames were discovered. The fire spread so rapidly that the men barely had time to escape. They snatched up blankets and clothing and ran to safety.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH

The three men were shot down as they ran to a nearby well with buckets to get water to fight the flames. Peter Mitroff, 32, was ambushed as he ran to the well. A charge from a shotgun struck him. More than a dozen shots were fired from a small clump of trees and the scattering shot wounded Spaes Lazaoff and Thomas Johnson, 35. The other workmen fled in panic.

Firemen were summoned from Mifflin Township and from Dravosburg but they were unable to fight the flames due to the lack of water. Fire Chief S. W.

COMPANIES REPORTED FIRING GUARDS

Strikers' Committee Head Resigns; New Chairman May Call Meeting Today

The deadlock continued in the six weeks' old taxicab drivers' strike today as these developments were noted:

1—Emergency drivers employed by the Yellow and Green Cab companies in an effort to break the strike were paid off and it was reported guards would be dismissed today.

2—Paul Toole, chairman of the strikers' committee, resigned and was succeeded by A. T. Siford.

3—Representatives of the Parmelee Corporation announced no peace negotiations would be considered until the legality of Mayor Kline's order banning cabs from the streets had been tested.

DRIVERS PAID OFF

At the Yellow Cab garage employes stated that imported drivers were being paid off, but that old drivers, who had served during the strike, were being retained. Guards and deputies also were to be dismissed, it was said. At the Green Cab garage, it was said all drivers and guards had been paid off last night.

E. S. Higgins, vice president of the Parmelee Corporation, said the force of men was merely being reduced, but that this had no significance as to negotiations with respect to a possible settlement.

Higgins made this statement:

"Naturally when Mayor Kline arbitrarily and without warning forbade to our cabs the use of the public streets, it created a serious and unprecedented situation in our operations. We have therefore made such reductions in our force as seemed best in the interest of economy—some have been dismissed—some have been merely furloughed. We are retaining skeleton crews for both companies. We can start operating at any time.

"These operating problems have absolutely no significance. There are no negotiations toward settlement and we do not

Pilot, Student Die In Crash of Plane

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Joseph Bonuellan, pilot-instructor, and Richard King, student flier, were burned to death yesterday when their airplane crashed and caught fire at the Chicago Flying Club airport. Witnesses said the plane slipped out of control while the pilot apparently was attempting to make a sharp turn at a height of 2[illegible] feet. It burst into flames as it fell.

OIL COMPANIES PLAN MERGER

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—The proposed $900,000,000 merger of the Standard Oil Company, of New York, and the Vacuum Oil Company, two former units of the Standard Oil "Trust," will not be submitted for ratification to stockholders until it is finally determined what is the attitude of Federal athuorities, it was learned today.

Letters to stockholders of the two concerns revealed that government intends to test the legality of the merger in the courts.

The contract entered into by the directors of the two companies provides the concerns shall preserve their separate entities but that both shall be controlled by a holding company known as the General Petroleum Corporation. Three shares of General Petroleum will be given in exchange for one of Vacuum Oil and one of General Petroleum for each of Standard Oil of New York.

Today was not only the birthday anniversary of George Washington, the father of our country, but also of George Washington Murren, the chief of county detectives, who is 62.

Nation Honors Washington On 198th Anniversary

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The one hundred and ninety-eighth anniversary of the birth of George Washington was observed today throughout the length and breadth of the nation which he had so great a part in establishing.

The city of Washington, founded by and named for the leader of the Continental army, and Alexandria, Va., the home town of the Revolutionary hero, across the historic Potomac River from the capital led the country in the celebration.

In both halls of Congress time was set aside for tribute to the "Father of his Country," while President and Mrs Hoover postponed pressing White House duties to join Governor Pollard, of Virginia, Secretary Hurley, and other high government officials, to review in Alexandria, the annual Washington Birthday parade.

In army posts on the continent and in distant possessions, aboard naval vessels at anchor and at sea, in diplomatic missions on foreign shores and in the cities and rural communities, fitting ceremonies were the order of the day.

The Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution gathered for exercises in Continental Hall, while in Alexandria the graves of fellow Masons of Washington were decorated with flowers. Boy Scouts lined up for their annual pilgrimmage to Mount Vernon to place wreaths on Washington's tomb. Patriotic organizations also planned ceremonies in Arlington National Cemetery and at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

TRACE THREAT AGAINST JUDGE

Postoffice inspectors are carrying on an investigation to learn the identity of the sender of a note to Judge Richard W. Martin, of Common Pleas Court, in which the latter was warned he would be killed if he sentenced three alleged taxicab strike sympathizers in contempt of court for alleged violation of the strike injunction.

The threatening note was mailed Wednesday in the downtown postoffice, and was received by Judge Martin, who is ill with grip at his home. The investigation is being made under the direction of Inspector George V Craighead.

LINER EUROPA REFLOATED

HAMBURG, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—The North German Lloyd liner Europa was refloated today after going aground in the outer harbor here on her first trip down the Elbe River.

Averill Harrimans Start Honeymoon

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Mr. and Mrs. W. Averill Harriman were on the way to Europe for a honeymoon today after a simple church ceremony united two of America's most prominent families.

Mrs. Harriman, who was Mrs. Marie Norton Whitney, former wife of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, was married to Mr. Harriman yesterday at All Souls' Church with immediate members of the family present. The bridegroom is a son of the late E. H. Harriman, railway magnate.

Admiral Jones, Ill, To Leave Conference

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, one of the chief naval advisers of the American naval conference delegation, is suffering from ulcers of the stomach, and while his condition is not serious, he will be forced to return home immediately, it was learned today.

Admiral Jones will sail on the first available boat next week.

Cardinal Perosi Dies at Vatican

TAFT RALLIES, SLEEPS WELL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Dr. Francis Hagner said today that William Howard Taft was "a little better" and that he had spent a very comfortable night.

It was the first report of improvement in the condition of the former chief justice in several days. Some apprehension had been occasioned by a visit that his daughter, Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., paid him yesterday, and by the news that his sons, Robert A. and Charles P. Taft, were holding themselves in readiness to start for the capital if the need arose.

Mr. Taft, his physicians have reported, is suffering from a general impairment of the circulatory system, a recurrence of an old bladder complaint, and his condition has been aggravated by heart trouble.

Upper Allegheny Ice Moves, Bringing Cold

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 22.—The great ice pack which broke up in the reaches of the upper Allegheny yesterday moved out during the night. The river here reached a crest of 9 feet and is now falling rapidly, the reading being 6 feet at 8 a. m. The heavy run of ice also witnessed a fall in temperature from warm 70 yesterday to frigid 29 this morning. Heavy fog covered the whole upper valley.

Premier Hamaguchi Carries Japan Polls

TOKIO, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Incomplete returns in the general election at 6 o'clock this afternoon showed the Minseito party, supporting the administration of Premier Hamaguchi, maintaining its lead with 114 seats in the Lower House of the Diet. The Seiyukai party, chief opposition to Hamaguchi, had obtained 64 seats and the Proletarians four. Other groups accounted for nine seats.

Air Stowaway, Once 'Hero,' Ignored at Plane Show

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—There is nothing but vanished "fame" for Clarence Terhune.

In 1928 his name was on every lip, for he became the world's first air stowaway when the Graf Zeppelin pointed its silvered bulk toward Europe.

Today he labored at the International Aircraft Exposition twirling the crank of a mimeograph machine to feed out stories of another file of "paper heroes."

Great and near-great stalked by the 21-year-old youth without seeing. No one knew him; no one cared.

His temporary work drawing to a close, his fleeting fame forgotten, he petitioned an exposition executive for a recommendation.

"Just a note," he said. "Tell them that I'm a good boy."

LEADERS WANT HOOVER TO DECLARE HIMSELF ON TARIFF

ATTITUDE ON BILL IRKS G.O.P.

Rumor President Leans to Rates Forced by Insurgents Brings Showdown Desire

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AR)—It is intimated that some administration leaders of the Senate may attempt to clear up the enigma of President Hoover's views on individual tariff rates by taking the question to the chief executive himself.

Throughout the long debate on the Smoot-Hawley bill, Mr. Hoover has maintained a consistent silence on the import levies. His message to the special session made some recommendations with respect to the administrative features and suggested a method for determining where rate changes might be advisable, but at no time has he talked publicly of the tariff in terms of figures and commodities.

LEADERS WORRIED

The present flurry in the administration ranks was brought about by the circularization of a story appearing in the Kansas City Star to the effect that the rates written into the bill by the Democratic-Independent Republican coalition are more to Mr. Hoover's liking than are those of the House measure or those recommended by the Senate finance committee.

The coalition has repeatedly exerted its strength to cut down rates on industrial commodities and raise those on agricultural products.

Senator Grundy, (Rep.) Pennsylvania, one of the nation's leading high tariff advocates for a quarter of a century, noticed the Star's article and, after learning that the author had conferred with the President before writing it, had copies of it made and distributed among a half dozen administration leaders.

COALITION ELATED

Senator Harrison, (Dem.) Mississippi, in turn called the article to the attention of the Senate, with the remark that even though the information it contained came through "the side door" the coalition was "proud to have the President" with it "in this fight."

There is a growing inclination among the Republican regulars to rally against the coalition-written tariff bill unless it is altered in conference. The possibility is looming, too, that the regulars may make an effort to reject the measure before it is sent to conference.

Some of them were frankly perturbed by the Star's article, especially after inquiry gave ground for according it full credence. Grundy, however, was not one of these. He declined to make any comment, beyond saying that he had noticed the story and had copies made at his office. He conferred with President Hoover yesterday on patronage questions, but would not say whether the tariff also had been discussed.

Struck by Pipe, Slovan Man Dies

Injured while working in the plant of the American Zinc and Chemical Company at Slovan, Washington County, August DeDiasio, 32, of Slovan, died last night in the Mercy Hospital, according to a report to the coroner. The accident occurred December 19. The man was struck on the head by a section of pipe that fell.

expect any until the legal situation is untangled."

TOOLE RESIGNS

Toole resigned as chairman of the strikers' committee after admitting he had made a misstatement to the effect that the American Federation of Labor had contributed $15,000 to the strikers' committee. Only local unions in Western Pennsylvania had contributed, he explained, saying he had "stretched the truth."

Toole's successor, Siford, a former Green cab driver, of 5427 McCandless avenue, asserted there was no change in the attitude of the strikers' committee. Other members indicated, however, that many of the strikers were not averse to arbitration as proposed by Mayor Kline.

Previously the strikers' committee had insisted that it would deal only with representatives of the company and would not accept arbitration through an intermediary.

FIND DEATH CAR

The Chrysler sedan in which William Dreibhold, 24, strike sympathizer, of 4796 Yew street, was shot and killed in Grant street Wednesday night by Motorcycle Patrolman William Harrison, after Yellow cabs had been stoned, was recovered in front of 635 Melwood street Thursday night, detectives announced today.

A bullet hole was found in the back of the car, indicating that Dreibhold was not leaning out of the car, as first reported, but was seated in the rear seat.

The car was towed to a garage at 2306 Penn avenue. It belongs to Joseph Fedor, of 186 Forty-fifth street, who fled following the shooting. Fedor's sister, Anna, arrested while wearing her brother's clothes, was released by detectives after making a statement that she had turned the car over to Dreibhold the night of the shooting.

The course which the cab companies will take relative to the Mayor's order clearing the streets of cabs has not been definitely determined, according to statements of officials.

Walter S. Laird, president of the Yellow Cab Company, and Paul L. Houston, head of the Green Cab Company, in a joint statement, said they planned to "test his powers in an appropriate manner."

The Mayor's action, designed to bring an end to rioting and general disorder which attended operation of cabs with strike-breaking drivers, has not proved entirely successful. Yesterday, a

The dwelling was operated as a labor camp by Alex Lazoff and managed by his brother, Spase, who was wounded. The occupants of the building were laborers of the Vang Construction Company, engaged on the airport job.

POSSES ON TRAIL

During the early morning hours, two posses, one headed by Police Chief C. A. Livingston, of Dravosburg, and the other by Chief Arthur Stevic, of Mifflin Township, scoured the hills for miles, but found no trace of the firebug and gunman.

The three victims were treated at the office of Dr. F. F. Bumney, at Dravosburg. Dr. Bumney said Lazoff had been struck by six shots, Mitroff by four and Johnson by 15. After receiving medical attention the men returned to the camp.

Boy Wanderer Back Home With Parents

Judson Jones, the 10-year-old traveler, was safe in his home today with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Jones, of the 5100 block, Carnegie avenue, Lawrenceville.

Alden Humes, 12, found Judson Wednesday and took him to the Humes home in Freeport road, Montrose. Judson remained at the Humes home while Mrs. Humes tried to locate his parents. He departed rather suddenly and was found again by workmen in Blaw-Knox, who turned him over to the police.

STRIKERS WARN OF FAKERS

A new element of lawbreaker has appeared in the taxi strike. He is the fake solicitor, several of whom have been reported canvassing households with can openers and other kitchen utensils for sale for the benefit of the strikers. Strike leaders today issued a warning against such methods of "buncoing" the public. Paul Toole, resigning chairman of the strikers' committee, said today: "The only means that are being used to raise funds are voluntary contributions and benefits staged by interested agencies, including a special theater performance, card parties and dances."

Donations also are received through the operation of privately-owned automobiles, 40 of which have been placed at the service of the public. No charge is made for the service which is rendered voluntarily by strikers owning and operating their own machines.

A special midnight theatrical performance is being given at the Academy theater Thursday. More than 20 acts from other theaters in the city have been billed and the services of at least three masters of ceremonies have been volunteered, according to the committee in charge of the event.

GRUNDY-LEWIS BATTLE OPENS IN PHILA.

Waters, Mackey Confer With Leaders; Pinchot's Visit Here May Decide His Stand

Auditor General Charles A. Waters will handle the campaign in his home city of Philadelphia for Senator Joseph R. Grundy to succeed himself, and Samuel S. Lewis for governor, the Associated Press states.

Party leaders throughout the state yesterday received blank petitions for signatures authorizing the placing the name of Grundy and Lewis on the primary ballot.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who also is Republican chairman of Allegheny County, said yesterday that a clerk in his office had been asked by Lewis if the petition would be acceptable.

Armstrong was asked if he would authorize the circulation of the petitions and replied:

"I wouldn't throw anyone's petitions away."

MACKEY IN CONFERENCE

Waters and Mayor Harry Mackey, of Philadelphia, were to confer today with ward leaders and business men of that city interested in the Grundy and Lewis candidacies.

Mrs. Dobson Eastman, chairman of the Republican Women of Philadelphia County, has declared she and her friends would support Grundy and Lewis.

Miss Marion L. Pyle, vice chairman of the Republican city committee of Philadelphia, has announced for Francis Shunk Brown for governor.

PINCHOT TO BE HERE

He may make a statement tomorrow when he comes to Pittsburgh to attend the funeral of Ambassador A. P. Moore.

Pinchot, who has reservations in the William Penn Hotel, is scheduled to make addresses here on Monday.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, manager of Pinchot's 1926 campaign for United States Senator against Senator George Wharton Pepper and William S. Vare, is on an ocean voyage.

Rumors hint Pinchot might run for governor with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis as candidate for Senator.

Leading labor leaders were reported to have talked in Washington recently with Pinchot and Davis.

HOOVER STANDS FIRM ON PACT

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN, Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—President Hoover will remain firm against any agreement on the part of the United States to an amendment of the Kellogg Pact to provide for the security that France is demanding as the price for reduction of her navy at the London conference.

This became known here following published reports from London that the American delegation had been in closed conference with British and Japanese delegates and that amendment of the Kellogg Pact was unofficially reported to have been discussed.

It was reported here that the White House had sent positive word to the American delegation that this government would not consider any proposal that would make the United States a party to a security pact for France or for a Mediterranean peace compact.

Meanwhile it was the view here that accession of the Chautemps' government in France to replace former Premier Tardieu and his cabinet, complicates the hope of success of the London conference.

HORST STORIES ADD CONFUSION

WOOSTER, O., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The disappearance of Melvin Horst, 4, today apparently was as great a mystery as when he failed to return to his Orrville home December 27, 1928.

The "confession" of Charles Hanna, 61, that he killed the boy, was further torn down with the declaration of Earl Conald, the other man held for questioning, that the slaying would have been impossible as described by Hanna.

The latest statement of Conald, who has corroborated Hanna's story that the two were together drinking at the time Melvin is supposed to have disappeared, left authorities admittedly at a loss as what to do today.

Only a few hours before Conald's new account, two Akron men were released when Hanna failed to identify them as the pair to whom he said he delivered Melvin's body. Hanna, who three times has confessed killing Melvin, twice has named different places where he said the body was buried, but now professes not to know what became of it. He has said he killed the boy with a wooden scantling while he and Conald were drinking in a garage.

HIGHEST COURT SNOOK HOPE

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The United States Supreme Court will be petitioned next Monday, to stay further the execution of Dr. James R. Snook, former Ohio State University professor, under sentence to die in the electric chair February 28, for the murder of Theora Hix, university co-ed.

The announcement was made here by his attorney, E. C. Ricketts, after Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall, of the Ohio Supreme Court, had refused to grant an application for another 30 days respite.

Should the federal tribunal refuse to grant a stay that would permit that court to consider Snook's application for a writ of certiorari in order to have his case reviewed then appeal will again be made to the Ohio tribunal next Tuesday afternoon, Ricketts said.

If he fails in both the United States and Ohio Supreme Courts, Ricketts said he will again ask Governor Myers V. Cooper to grant the stay.

FIND WOMAN HACKED BY SAW

Drink-Crazed Husband Held After Niece Discovers Body Mutilated in Home Cellar

International News Service.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 22.—That Mrs. Gervis Castner, 31, of Avoca, a mining village near here, may have been alive when a fiend started sawing her body in two—after which he buried the parts in burlap sacks—was the startling disclosure made by Dr. H. Guyler, deputy coroner of Luzerne County, today.

Dr. Guyler said the condition of the body indicated the possibility that the woman was tortured.

Meanwhile, Gervis Castner, the husband, is in custody of state police at the Wyoming Barracks. Dazed and stupefied, he has refused to answer questions about the discovery of his wife's body in the cellar of their home.

HUSBAND SILENT

Unkempt, ragged, with his hair, evidently uncut for months, hanging over his eyes, he has maintained his silence ever since he was placed under arrest late yesterday when the body was found.

Castner, struck by a railroad train about a year ago, has been "queer" since that time, according to police.

The woman had been missing for a week prior to the discovery of her body, police report.

Three little children, ranging in age from a few months to 3 years, lay whimpering in a rude crib.

Mrs. Sadie McHugh, a niece of Mrs. Castner, discovered the body when she went to the house yesterday to try to aid the children motherless for a week.

FIND BLOODY SAW

A blood-stained saw, found near the two burlap sacks in which the woman's torso and legs had been hastily wrapped, bore evidence that it was used in dismembering the body.

Dr. Guyler hopes to be able to determine when the woman was killed; whether she was beaten to death and her body hacked, or if the dismemberment took place before life was extinct.

Castner was a mine worker, employed at the Butler collieries. It is feared that he was semi-demented since being struck by the train a year ago. He had been intoxicated for almost the entire week preceding his arrest, police say.

5 FACE ARREST IN JAIL FAKE

Federal warrants were placed today in the hands of United States Marshal J. C. McGregor, for the arrest of Attorney Samuel Y. Rossiter, of Erie, Pa., and four other men, who are alleged in a complaint filed before the United States commissioner to have conspired to substitute a prisoner in a rum smuggling case in the Federal District Court.

The alleged deception was discovered, it was said, several days after Judge R. M. Gibson sentenced James Patrone, alias Joseph Jarvis, on December 31, 1929, to serve 60 days in the Erie County jail. The latter was alleged to have entered a plea of guilty to the smuggling charge in the place of Stanley Wells, of Port Coburn, Ont., said to be a wealthy rum smuggler.

Patrone and Wells are defendants in the conspiracy charge. The other two are Lester Beals, alias Fred Black, and Joseph D. Donovan, an Erie garage owner. Beals, under the name of Black, pleaded guilty with Patrone in the smuggling charge and is undergoing a 60-day sentence in the Erie jail. Donovan was said to have appeared in the role of a bondsman for Wells in the smuggling charge.

Detainers against Patrone and Beals, whose terms expire next week, will be lodged today with Warden Matt Hess, of the Erie jail, for their detention pending arrest on the conspiracy charge.

The filing of the conspiracy charge by C. L. Keen, special agent of the Department of Justice in the Pittsburgh district, followed a lengthy investigation by agents of the latter department: the United States Coast Guard, and by United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his assistants. Wells has evaded arrest since the plea by Patrone and is believed to be in hiding in Canada, although he formerly spent much time on the American side of Lake Erie.

Chicago Fails to Raise Funds to Pay Employes

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Something has gone wrong with the campaign to raise $74,000,000 pledged to bring relief to 40,000 payless and destitute public employes, it became evident today, when a checkup showed that less than $6,000,000 has been raised.

This means an indefinite postponement of the payday for which city, county and school board employes have looked forward to collecting their $11,909,430 in overdue salaries. Many of these employes already have been evicted from their homes because they cannot pay rent, it was disclosed.

Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens' relief committee, to which the pledges for funds were made, has again appealed for help in the new crisis.

Strawn has requested that a "drive" be instituted among all business to subscribe the funds in return for tax anticipation warrants.

Philip R. Clark, banker and capitalist, in response to Strawn's cry for help, is organizing a prototype of the war-time Liberty loan drives, with "Four Minute Men," to appeal for subscriptions.

'Bossy' Gillis, Now 'Rich,' Headed for Hollywood

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Returning after nine years to the port where he served as a member of the "Black Gang" of the destroyer Burns, Andrew J. (Bossy) Gillis, the "Bad Boy" Mayor of Newburyport, Mass., landed here from the Panama Pacific liner Virginia.

As the vessel was docking the mayor told, in salty language, how he had been forced to stand at attention on the old Santa Fe wharf for one hour in the old days because he attempted to go ashore in a suit of tailor-made blues—"So I wouldn't look like a boot"—and added a colorful description of the officer who made him do so.

Having recently sold for $41,000 cash the service station in Newburyport, which put the ex-bluejacket on the front pages of newspapers all over the United States, the Mayor is now taking a vacation, with the avowed intention of "looking over Hollywood" and dropping in for a friendly chat with some of California's mayors.

He said he probably was the only mayor who ever conducted the affairs of a city from a jail cell.

FOUR BANKERS POISONED ON TAKING COLD REMEDY

TWO VICTIMS RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

President, Cashier, Clerks Stricken; Salesman Samples It, Then Disappears

Two employes of the American State Bank and Trust Company are in the Mercy Hospital and two bank officers, including Ivan Bielak, president, are recovering today from effects of a mysterious cold "remedy" purchased yesterday from a food products concern. One of the company's representatives, called to the banking rooms in Grant street when the four victims were stricken, took a potion to prove it a harmless preparation. He vanished suddenly shortly afterwards without an explanation the bank employes say, and they believe he too, became ill.

PATIENTS RECOVERING

The two patients in Mercy Hospital were reported "doing nicely" today. They are Alexander O. Froede, assistant cashier, and Joseph Angeline, clerk in the foreign department. The fourth reported victim is Frank J. Gurcak, cashier. Both Gurcak and President Bielek, after receiving medical aid from Dr. A. J. Korhnak, who maintains offices in the building, were able to go to their homes.

The condition of the stricken men was described as alkalosis, a condition caused by the presence of too much alkaline in the system. Physicians queried on the case described a newly advanced theory concerning colds as an acid condition of the system.

DANGEROUS CONDITION

"Acidosis," one medical man said, "is the technical term for this condition and it is considered a dangerous state in its advanced form. Some physicians hold that a patient suffering from a cold is afflicted with this acidosis condition, and to correct it an alkaline must be administered, but this is described as an extremely dangerous practice."

All four of the victims of the mysterious cold preparation, described as a food product rather than a drug, were reported to have suffered severe emesis, an abdominal spasm superinduced by the overdose of alkaline.

FATE OF RABBIS STILL IN DOUBT

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—(INS.)—Reports reaching here today still lacked exact information as to the probable fate of six prominent rabbis reported to be held for trial on March 5 at Minsk, Russia, on charges of being connected with Jewish organizations fostering religious schools.

According to the reports here, Chief Rabbi Gleser, a prominent figure in Jewish circles in Russia, and five other rabbis, are charged with having communicated with foreign organizations of schools of the type barred by the soviet anti-religious policy.

Although the usual penalty for such charges is to be death, it is generally believed that the Soviet officials would only demand imprisonment or exile as punishment.

Men Buried Under Coal, 2 Known Dead

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Two men were known to be dead today and from three to five others were believed dead following collapse of a coal shed, which sent 900 tons of coal on top of a group of workers.

Most of the men were not regular workers for the coal company and a checkup of the missing employes was difficult. Two bodies had been recovered early today as rescue workers searched the ruins of the collapsed structure.

FISTIC BATTLE MARKS FILM WEDDING

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Fisticuffs, with the bridegroom in the leading role, featured the wedding here last night of Ethlyne Claire, screen actress, and Ernest Westmore, studio makeup director.

A process server and a newspaper camera man played strong supporting parts.

Miss Claire and Westmore took their marriage vows in the Hollywood Presbyterian Church and had come out smilingly to greet photographers on the steps. The process server then appeared, seeking to present Westmore with a summons to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for allegedly being $1,700 in arrears in alimony to his first wife, Mrs. Veoda Westmore.

As Westmore came out the door his 7-year old daughter by his first marriage called to him. He turned to speak to the child and the process served slipped the document into his hand.

A flashlight boomed, and Westmore hurtled down the steps, leaping upon the back of the news photographer. The cameraman was knocked down and an unidentified man removed the plate.

Officers escorted the photographer to the police station, but no charges were placed against him and he was released, minus his picture and with a broken camera. He announced he would ask Westmore's arrest for assault and battery and destruction of property.

ART DISCUSSED BY KAUFMANN

Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann's department store, discussed art in its relation to color and design at a gathering of 150 of the store's buyers last night in the museum lecture hall. Mr. Kaufmann said that buyers as a group, exercise great influence upon a great body of people and they should realize the importance of line, design and harmony of colors as presented in art.

Dr. Avinoff discussed art in nature with illustrations. He conducted half the group through the museum so they might observe examples of nature's art. Miss Margaret M. In the trial the state presented the testimony of Colonel Calvin H. Goddard, ballistic expert, that the bullets taken from French's body were fired from revolvers belonging to the defendants.

50 WITNESSES SUMMONED IN FORNEY CASE

Summoned to Appear March 10 to Testify in Trial of Alleged Slot Machine King

Approximately 50 witnesses have been subpenaed by District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner to appear March 10 and testify for the state in the long-delayed trial of Alfred W. Forney, alleged slot machine king.

Gardner did not reveal the date set for the trial until after all the witnesses had been served with summonses, so that none could slip out of town and evade service.

WITNESSES MISSING

Three or four important witnesses could not be found and are believed to have given fictitious names and addresses at the time of the graft probe more than a year ago. They are said to have been operating slot machines under aliases and to have pleaded guilty, paid fines and to have been paroled under these names.

Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty, who is to try the Forney case for the commonwealth, quizzed about a score of witnesses in the district attorney's office yesterday afternoon, and others have been told to be on hand next Friday, by which time Haggerty expects to have his entire case lined up.

16 YEARS POSSIBLE

The indictment against Forney contains 16 counts, 15 of maintaining gambling devices, and one of being a common gambler. If convicted on all counts his maximum sentence could be a year on each count, or 16 years.

Forney was to have been tried last March but jumped his $2,500 bail. After vanishing for more than six months, he suddenly appeared with his attorney, H. D. Hirsh, and gave himself up, posting new bail of $7,000. His case was set for trial just before Christmas, but was postponed when several of the witnesses were discovered to be in Canada on a hunting trip, and District Attorney Gardner was laid up in his home with an injury.

Poisons 3 Grandchildren, 2 Die, Tries Suicide

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 22.—(INS.)—Rather than part with his three young grandchildren, Jesse Waite, 57, bought the youngsters bright new dresses and gorged them on ice cream and then fed them rat poison, according to police, with the result that two small girls are dead and another was believed dying in Receiving Hospital today.

Waite, with whom the children lived, also swallowed some of the poison and may die.

The dead children are: Alma Vernal, 3; Ruth, her sister, 5.

The third sister, Betty, 8, probably will die, hospital attendants said today.

The children's stepfather, Manuel Vernal, and their 24-year-old mother Julia, were in another room of the home when the poison was administered.

Vernal had announced his intention of moving the family to another house. The grandfather was to be left behind. Waite protested that he could not bear parting with his granddaughters.

Lindsey Wins Disbarment Contest in California

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Disbarment action proposed against former Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, for alleged acceptance of a fee while holding office will not be taken, the board of governors of the state bar of California announced today.

"I am very much gratified," Lindsey said when informed of the decision. "The decision does not surprise me."

In appealing to the board, Lindsey, through his attorney, pointed out that prior to disbarment in Colorado by the Colorado Supreme Court, this court twice previously had held that he was not a lawyer when he received the money, $37,500, from Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, of New York City, former wife of W. E. D. Stokes, multi-millionaire.

Lindsey said he would file an application for reinstatement in Colorado, based on these decisions.

The alleged fee was received by Lindsey in 1926.

The question of Lindsey's status as a lawyer here arose after the California bar had been advised of the action in Colorado. In making its announcement the California bar said in part:

"The facts do not justify it (the board) in asking the Supreme Court of California to set aside the order admitting Judge Lindsey or in taking any other action in reference to the matter."

Both women were rescued by Ralph and Samuel Fina, who operate a garage nearby.

ARREST BREAKS DOPE RING

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—(INS)—With the arrest of Abe Chapman, 28, following a vicious battle, federal narcotics agents today announced they had captured the alleged head of a huge dope syndicate which has operated on an extensive scale in New York and Chicago.

With Chapman the agents seized a large quantity of narcotics which included 50 pounds of opium and 65 ounces of morphine, valued at $15,000. Federal operatives estimated the ring had been doing a $200,000 monthly business.

Chapman was held on bonds of $40,000. The arrest of Chapman, known as the "Lone Wolf," came as a result of the exposure of a large dope ring in New York several weeks ago, according to Chief Narcotic Agent Ralph H. Oyler.

The narcotics were found in Chapman's car when he delivered $2,000 worth of opium to two federal agents, on a street corner, according to Oyler.

Slayer, Doomed Twice, Back in Penitentiary

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Feb. 22.—George Saunders, of Logan County, W. Va., entered the State prison here, the only man who ever entered it on two different occasions, each time condemned to die on the gallows. He was originally convicted of murder July 1, 1928, and sentenced to hang October 28, 1928. He took an appeal which stayed his execution and the appeal was later denied, with the result that he was returned to Logan County and re-sentenced to be executed on March 28 by Judge Maaman Jackson. He is the only condemned man now in the prison and will be the first to be executed under the regime of Warden A. C. Scroggins.

Pattern 1664

Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

A wee maiden would look perfectly ravishing in this little bloomer dress, so smart with its raglan shoulders and back yoke below which gathers give the freedom and grace to the skirt part. The collar, cuffs and front panel are made of contrasting fabric cunningly trimmed with ruffling.

For this model, printed percale, gingham, pique or pongee would be lovely. Gayly colored designs on white grounds, with white trimming, are always so desirable for youngsters. Red, yellow, green and blue are the popular spring colors.

Designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 2 requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material and ¾ yard trimming.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model. The pattern has ample and exact instructions. Yardage is given for every size. A perfect fit is guaranteed.

Patterns will be delivered upon receipt of FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped or stamps. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

Our NEW SPRING BOOK of PATTERN STYLES is now ready. Price FIFTEEN CENTS, but only TEN CENTS when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Charity Ball Planned Dec. 27

WITH the gay springtime with its weddings not yet here, society folks are already planning several seasons ahead, and are thinking of events for the winter. Each year the social calendar becomes more and more crowded; so dates for balls and debuts and all sorts of entertainments have to be taken months and sometimes even several years ahead.

Today I know of a tentative date for the charity ball of the Federation of Girl School Societies. The date named is December 27, and of 'course the scene will be the William Penn Hotel as usual.

INFORMAL entertainments are having a decided vogue. Yesterday Mrs. Chester Marsh Van Kleeck gave a luncheon in the Community Kitchen, of Sewickley, in honor of Mrs. Frederick B. Hufnagel, who will leave soon for a month in Gotham.

On Wednesday Mrs. John Ebbert Porter will entertain in her Sewickley home.

NOW news comes flying from Baltimore of another betrothal, making February another June in the matter of engagements. Miss M. Blanche Chipman of Cedarcroft road, Baltimore, Md., announces the engagement of her sister, Ann Edith Chipman, to Martyn K. Coster, of Walnut street. The wedding is to take place sometime in early April in the home of the bride.

HAVE you heard that the Rose debs, Anne and Margaret Rose, daughters of the Don Roses of Sewickley, and their brother, Evans, are in Pinehurst? They are with their grandfather, Judge John A. Evans, and will remain there until spring has arrived in the north.

NEXT month will have its theater benefits, too. And again the Alvin will attract a large benefit audience. The National Park Alumnae Association will sponsor the production of "Follow Through" at the Alvin on March 10.

EVERY day I seem to hear of more and more of the Pittsburgh folks going to California. At the ever popular Huntington Hotel in Pasadena, are registered the George P. Rhodeses who are much interested in the many sports.

The William N. Frews, of Fifth avenue, who are in New York, are registered at the St. Regis, I have heard.

Did you know that the George S. Olivers, of Ellsworth avenue, who were on a West Indies cruise, had returned? They are spending a few days in New York and are registered at the Ambassador.

And the George D. Edwardses, of Sewickley, who are also staying at the Ambassador, will spend the week-end in Wallingford, Conn.

And Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones, III, are in Gotham, too.

GARDNER WAITS EVANS' CHARGE

Former City Controller Henry Oliver Evans has failed thus far to get in touch with him, District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner says, to lay before him the evidence Evans says he has of a discharged employe in the controller's office having conspired with an employe of the Pittsburgh Reduction Company to cheat the city out of thousands of dollars on the monthly settlements of the city's garbage collection bills.

Gardner sent word to Evans' office asking that he call him so a date could be fixed for a conference, when Evans might lay all his evidence before Gardner. The latter wants to see if Evans has enough tangible proof to warrant the district attorney taking the case before the grand jury.

College Club 'Broadcasts' Program

THE College Club held its regular weekly meeting yesterday afternoon—and how! The bulletin announced the program as "Follies of 1929 broadcast from Station CCP" and that was all the information the members had when they crowded into the all-too-small assembly room. Removal of a screen and setting of a property or two and they were in a radio broadcasting station where "Lee McNamee" (Mrs. Edward B. Lee, to whose cleverness and ingenuity the program was due) was announcing in her best McNamee-Bowes fashion.

The rest was one unbroken gale of laughter that began at sight of the microphone, a mousetrap hung in the center of a bird cage frame. "Flora Someroff Someron" (Mrs. James H. Greene) did one of those "and-variation" things at the piano and later gave Dr. Sigmund Spaeth's Yankee Doodle in the style of the various masters. "Television" enabled the audience to see Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Richard Allen, pajama-clad, take their daily dozen in amusing fashion; Mrs. B. O. Austin was a sweet-voiced boy soprano; Mrs. Harvey Fouse, as James Hackett and Mary Garden (dressed half and half) gave a screamingly funny rendition of a Trovatore duet; there were two Tompkins Corners skits, a bridge game, "bridge as it is bridged;" Mrs. F. S. Follansbee gave two readings and Katherine and Jean Louise Frost, in Dutch costume and sabots, did a charming little dance. But the peak of the entertainment was a pantomime, hilariously done, of the Campbell poem, "Lord Ullin's Daughter." In this Mrs. Follansbee, Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Austin were the boatman, the daughter and lover, and Mrs. Lee was the wind, Mrs. Henry Cole, the army, and Mrs. Fouse, the father.

The String Ensemble Program on March 18 will feature Virginia Kendrick, winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs' contest, as soloist.

PRIMROSE SHADE FAVORED FOR EVENING ENSEMBLES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—If we follow the primrose path this season, it will be quite all right. For primrose yellow emerges as one of the best liked pastel hues of the season, its delicate tones admirably suited to either blonde or brunette, and its appeal, whether the fabric chosen be chiffon, satin or velvet, being definite and distinctive, especially when combined with a fur of darker color such as mink, kolinsky or sable. For day wear all shades of brown and yellow are seen constantly, a favorite being brown and beige, a pleasing and successful combination. The brown mixture tweeds are especially liked for more strenuous wear, for afternoon clothes, all beige is a frequent choice, the pastel yellows making their appearance at night. Brown has emerged as the alternative for black when in town and so it is not surprising to see it score honors as a leading color for resort wear. The primrose shade is favored for evening ensembles as well as dresses and wraps, and is expected to be much seen during the summer.

THE two drawings present clothes that run the gamut from primrose yellow to dark brown. The first is a coat that was sketched at a gala dinner at the Ambassadeurs, that very smart restaurant in the Cannes Casino. The wrap, which was worn by a very tall, slim woman, is of primrose yellow chiffon velvet trimmed with sable. The coat is quite long in front and dips to the floor in the back, clinging close to the figure throughout two-thirds of its length. It terminates in an ample circular flounce set on beneath a narrow band of the sable. A draped hood effect is given at the back by looping a separate piece of the material beneath the wide fur collar.

THE second sketch is of a tailored frock of beige and brown tweed with a matching hat, which was worn by a slim young thing at the Hotel Carlton at Cannes. The high waistline is marked by a narrow belt of brown leather. A loosely-draped scarf of the tweed, attached at the right shoulder, is thrown back over the other shoulder and beneath it is worn a soft turned-down collar of white linen bound with brown. The buttons on the bodice and cuffs are of brown galalith. This frock is a delightful example of what is being worn at the leading resorts by the smart younger set.

HIVELY GIVEN JOB BACK

F. H. Frederick, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, today announced a decision of the commission, reinstating Harry Hively, Jr., who last July was dismissed from his position as clerk and accountant in the city controller's office. It is understood Hively will be reimbursed for his lost time.

Chairman Frederick said that the commission found Hively not guilty of the charge of disloyalty and unfaithfulness to the public interest as had been charged by former Controller Henry Oliver Evans, who ousted the employe.

Hively was accused of concealing information concerning fraud said to have been perpetrated against the city in garbage contracts. He has been employed by the city in various positions for approximately 19 years. His salary at the time of his dismissal was $237.50 a month, and if he is entitled to back pay he will have approximately $1,600 due him.

Arbuthnot Speaks On African Wilds

Thrills of big-game hunting in Africa were described by Dr. Thomas S. Arbuthnot, of Pittsburgh, in an address last night in Carnegie Music Hall. Dr. Arbuthnot's address on "An African Hunting Trip" was given for the benefit of the Children's Hospital. The speaker is chairman of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Dr. Arbuthnot described an attack upon one of the guides of his party by a leopard and the guide's narrow escape from death due to infection of the wounds. Motion pictures and slides were shown of the hunting expedition.

18,499 From State Visit Foreign Lands

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Pennsylvania furnished 18,499, or 9.39 per cent of the tourists and world travelers which the United States sent to Europe and other foreign parts last year.

The figures are taken from a comprehensive report on the subject just issued here by the State Department. The report shows that in excess of 200,000 Americans were issued passports in 1929. New York City led the country by a wide margin, with 29.88 per cent of the total, or 58,834 world travelers.

He will be attended by William Cochran and Fred Maughman. The Rev. C. H. Canfield, pastor of the Clinton Presbyterian Church, will perform the ceremony. If the spectators pay attention to J. V. Loughran, manager of the show, they will exercise the same decorum common at a church wedding.

A kitchen cabinet, groceries, ring and various other gifts will be given the bride.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb 22. POOR old Disarmament Conference. Even if it does make an agreement with each other, why before they can telegraph the news back to their countries the men that made the agreement may be thrown out of office.

The Coolidges Among Visitors

A squib about Louise Fazenda? Who was being interviewed. And be having very ultra too. Blame by the interviewer got up enroute to the exit. Louise still sat. Finally in a bit of a dither the Fazenda said: "If you'll wait just a minute until I find my shoes!" Robert Armstrong buying his wife a grand piano. Um a belated Christmas present. Plenty Courtesy But Few Chairs

AGNES O'MALLEY points from her reliable typewriter the information that Oscar Hammerstein and Sigmund Romberg have hair chairs on the set with their names printed on the back. An infallible indication of eminence. And continues the report a stage actress was heard to remark that the main difference between the stage and the movies is that at a stage rehearsal there is no coffee and plenty of seats, a movie rehearsal plenty of courtesy and no place to sit. Flicker arches must not be so good as suspected.

ATTRACTIONS ON STAGE, SCREEN

Marcella featured dancer in George White's "Scandals" which opens in the Alvin Monday evening, not only never appeared in a Broadway show before but never saw the Great White Way until she was signed for a role in "Scandals."

RUM RUNNERS RUNNING IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE L. GRUNDISH

Ben Hecht, Chicago newspaper man who has turned all kinds of gangsters loose on a good-natured movie public since he started writing stories and dialogue for the talkies about two years ago, has come out with another of his book-bang dramas about the rackets. This latest effort, which is all about those bad, bad rum-runners, is titled "Broadhouse Nights," and is being exhibited in the Stanley as the screen feature of that theater's stage show.

And the nights in this movie what they're affairs they are. Both are nights crowded with bootleggers, things cabaret entertainers and two staggering newspaper men. These latter are sent by their Chicago paper to get a story on a rum gang that has a half million dollars worth of booze stored away in a neighboring town. One of them gets the story all right—but he also gets a bullet just as he's phoning the story to his city editor. The other however is more fortunate. He not only gets the story, but lives to get the girl.

NO TIME FOR SLEEP

There are very few quiet moments in the film. When the rum-runner boss isn't killing or preparing to kill someone, there is sure to be a newspaper reporter around—clamoring through transoms, making love to his old sweetheart from Kansas or speeding across country roads with the villain not far behind. In between, foreboding faces loom, a chief of police is dispensed with and some night club entertainers break into song.

Charles Ruggles again as a drunken reporter is the big number. Not always convincing, he is always entertaining. Fred Kohler does the rum boss and his looks will get him a corner in any rogue's gallery. Helen Morgan, taking a fling at the talkies, registers fair as the heroine. An outstanding piece of work in a trivial role is given by Jimmy Durante, Broadway comedian. Forced by the story action to clown when he believes the gallows will find him with the dawning, he is the proverbial knock-out.

THESE MOVIE GANGSTERS

"Roundhouse Nights" is agile underworld amusement. It packs a wallop. It is action personified. But and at the same time, it is just another picture, and a very silly picture in spots. One of these spots comes when the movie-makers want us to believe that a gangster can do away with a chief of police and then step into the chief's shoes at the office and get away with it.

An interesting show. "Jazz Preferred" is being dished up on the stage by Dick Powell. Human statues, three of them, come to life from around a fountain and give a neat dance display. Kendall Capps is there with steps and saxophone, and Val and Ernie Stanton put out the comedy chatter. There is a songstress who gets a big hand. Mr. Powell and his band are winners in a novelty number. Mr. Powell also sits on top of Bernie Armstrong's organ and the two of them go through a songalogue together. David Broudy takes his orchestra through "Vagabond King" tunes as the overture.

You have lots of time to read on Sunday and if you like to follow the Pirates you'll get some interesting gossip right off the bat from Charles J. Doyle, who is with the team at the Paso Robles training camp for their first work-outs.

Walter Winchell On Broadway

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.

Man About Town

WHAT with the monotony of Harlem and the listlessness of Broadway, the lorgnette set has pounced upon a new gay asylum christened "Hot Feet's," located on West Houston street. The tony crowd that you observe at the Mayfair, in the Ritz or at the Colony or the Embassy, Rolls-Royce or Hispano their way down to the new late sin-den after the uptown dives have drawn their blinds, and they hurl their coin at the panting brownskins.

It is a replica of the old "Black Bottom" or "Furnace" rendezvous when those popular places were in the Fooey Fifties, and the same sepia showfolk officiate. The talent never let their hips get stiff, and there is an incessant parade of walters cake walking or strutting across the postage stamp size dancing floor as they deliver their tray-loads. But it is most hilarious when you summon a torrid torso-tosser over to your table.

Then if you fold a dollar bill lengthwise and place it on the edge of the table it serves as a signal for the entire cast to collect about the star thigh-grinder and whoop mysterically—until the gal carries off the dollar without touching it with her paws.

ACE STILL AN ACE

WONDER why Mr. Ziegfeld's "Simple Simon" show decided at the final moment to eliminate Fred Keating's famously known bird-cage stunt? It is well that the showman cut it from the proceedings, for the show doesn't need it and Mr. Keating, who won the favor of New Yorkers with the swelegant bit of magic when he first appeared in "Almanacs," considers it his ace. Keating appealed to all the critics via personal letter, and it is probable that if the show employed it Ziegfeld would have been wrist-spanked for hitting a fellow who isn't his size.

An obscure and desperate-for-recognition master of ceremonies thefted the stunt at the Capitol Theater last week, incidentally. But he'll probably never try it again considering the humiliation he brought upon himself. He first told how simple it was to do. All I do is count three," he announced, "and presto, the cage and the bird disappear!"

But it didn't, and got caught in his cuff!

SO LONG, HOBOKEN

THE new beer gardens in the Yorkville sector opened auspiciously the other eve, and the local intelligentiemen and their ladies came. It is the tastiest brew in the town and will most likely prove the death knell for the Hoboken saloons. Three seidels of it and you tell your real salary . . . Among other delightful diversions is sitting between John Held, Jr. and Peter Arno in the Algonquin dining room when they are in the mood to scribble libelous caricatures of Well-Knowns on the backs of menus . . . It is then that these expert pen and pencil men reveal their true opinions of you, you, you and probably you! . . . The news photographers at the Ziegfeld premiere snapped anyone in a tall hat and when one of us pointed to Ring Lardner (in a felt hat) and suggested that he would make a good subject, the hocus-focus lad growled, "We were told to take pictures of celebrities."

ANVIL WORKERS

LEAVE it to the peasants of the Broadwhalen Belt to belittle the success of one who has clicked . . . His critics now argue that Harry Rosenthal of "June Moon" isn't so clever as All That! . . . The role is actor-proof, according to the idlers, and Mr. Rosenthal's interpretation of the piano-player assignment contributes nothing to the show . . . All because one Murray Smith (in the same part) who, like Rosenthal, never appeared on a stage before, has been listed by the Chicago critics as the outstanding member of the Chicago cast . . . David Belasco, the most priestly of the theatrical impresarios, is now wearing his collar front ways and with a cravat, the Haberdashers' Association will be overjoyed to learn . . . Burton Crawford of the Social Register, who apparently dislikes being conspicuous, goes to the Central Park Casino and other tony places in a blue dress suit with brass buttons.

CHATTER LOSES SNAP

The subject matter for sophisticates has petered out, according to the illiterotics . . . There is nothing to talk about . . . Divorce, which was once scandalous, is now commonplace . . . Sane people talk sanely about companionate alliances . . . Cigarets, once the symbol of looseness, now represent a personal, sensory, sexless pastime . . . Rouge, once the sign of the scarlet woman, now is essential to dignified dress . . . A shiny nose is vulgar, and sallow faces are an intruison . . . Indicating indigestion . . . Risque stories of the past are openly retailed in any fashionable revusical . . . Profanity, that old-fashioned sign of smartness, has been killed off by the stage.

HAREMS have fallen into desuetude . . . Gambling has become a respectable home amusement . . . Legs are no longer a treat . . . The glamor of the stage has been dulled by the already dull cinemas . . . In fewer words, this wholesale freedom of speech is taking all the fun out of conversation, because there aren't any forbidden subjects any more. Chattering with nothing daring to chatter about is just as uninteresting as drinking would be if we didn't have a prohibition law.

Something To Think About as you read the amusement advertising columns: Helen Morgan, who was starred in her first Paramount Philicker "Applause," is now buried under the billing of Charles Ruggles and Clayton, Jackson & Durante in the same firm's newest release "Broadhouse Nights" . . . Judge argues that the only thing worse than Broadway night life are the novels written about it. Haw!

RAWSBRY SAUCE

NOT since the first year of the new Madison Square Garden, when McTigue was awarded the decision over Tiger Flowers has the record for booing been shattered. That is, not until the judges of the Golden Gloves bouts robbed a Porto Rican named Alvarez of his just reward the other night. The judges, it appears, were deciding a lad's merit on his third (and last round) activity. If you knocked your man down twice or whipped him in the first two rounds, it didn't matter. The Bid Idea, according to the judges, was to do something spectacular in the final round, and if you did, you copped all honors.

After a series of questionable decisions, the Alvarez burglary happened and the 22,500 fans turned on the "Bronx Cheer," which lasted 17 minutes, the most deafening and devastating raspberry ever heard.

It reminded us of the time we played at the Bijou in New Haven.

YOUNGER SET THEME OF FILM

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

Olive Borden and Lloyd Hughes are stars in "Hello, Sister," new film in the Enright. Like a horse on a treadmill, when they're through they have arrived where they started from. Promising to reveal to us the secrets of the wild younger set's night life, the producer, James Cruze, has shown us nothing we haven't done ourselves, found harmless, tiresome.

Sentiment, pathos and love have all been injected in proper doses, giving the show about as much individuality as a postcard announcement of a club meeting.

One good thing helps the movie along to its close—a much-featured circular concrete staircase, jutting starkly from a wall, guarded by an excellent, unadorned wrought-iron rail.

Showing some beautiful drops and good chorus costumes, Jay Mills limps along in his stage show quite nicely, thank you. He sings once with a megaphone, once without.

A Negro lad by the name of Derby deserves mention for a two-curtain-call tap dance. A natural ease, an unaffected smile, a few peppy lines give him a solo act that's a potential wow.

Dorothy Brown is a good piece of property. She hasn't been given much of a part, other than to set off Mills. A good voice and a neat pair of feet aren't doing all they could, if they were given half a chance.

Two suggestions to the management: Cut out the first three jokes in the Hickey Brothers' act—they've punched on stages here all too recently, and note that Jay Mills can sing better than he can rhapsodize on the pitfalls of Broadway.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Dr. Samuel Harden Church, sponsor of a third political party, would abolish all laws with a religious basis and banish from Washington "every hypocritical preacher" who seeks laws making the morals and manners of other people the same as his own. What is your opinion of his stand?

JOHN D. CRAIG, Union Trust Building, bond salesman: "I agree that the churches are probably stepping beyond the bounds of their authority and are pressing moral questions by law a little too much. Dr. Church is probably taking a broader view of the situation than the average layman can."

John D. Craig

FLORENCE McCRORY, East End, clerk: "I think church problems should be left to the churches. If prohibition is a church-passed law, of course, the churches have shown their lack of wisdom in passing it. So I agree with Dr. Church. The preachers belong in their houses of worship, not in the offices of Congress.

Miss McCrory

MISS VIRGINIA HARMON, Schenley Farms, radio singer: "In a general way I agree with Col. Church, insofar as church and politics should be separated. But religion touches closely on economic and other features of our daily life where there might be some relation between the two that we could not easily do without. Surely the church should have some voice in the passing of moral laws, of which everyone admits we must have some."

Miss Harmon

MRS. RALPH W. JOHNSTON, Congress of Women's Clubs, executive: "This country was founded by religious people. The very foundation of the entire nation was laid by Catholics and Protestants who came to this land to found a government with the proper moral influence on its people. Religion is part of the scheme of things and I fail to see how Dr. Church can call for the church's eviction from Washington politics."

Mrs. Johnston

THE REV. DR. G. F. BRENNEMAN, downtown, minister: "That is Col. Church trying to force his ideas on others when he is objecting to other people forcing their ideas on him. The Christian religion is on the basis of our entire civilization. Any of our citizens who object to the proper influence of the Christian religion is seeking to undermine our civilization. Who are hypocritical preachers? I do not know any preacher whom I consider a hypocrite. Would it not be well for Col. Church to show to others the tolerance he wishes them to have toward him?

Dr. Brenneman

E. A. McCULLOUGH, Squirrel Hill, investments: "I don't agree with him. I think, since we are taught to believe in the clergy from our mother's knee up, the spirit of our religious belief should enter into the consideration of laws governing our morals and manners. I don't believe in fanatics, of course, nor in the church's running our government. At the present time, our morals are all founded on religion.

LOVEJOY

By BEATRICE BURTON

Lovejoy Starts for Nevada With Steve Oglebay

CHAPTER XL.

"BUT, Steve, suppose there should be people on the train who happened to know us," Lovejoy said uneasily. "What would they think of us? They'd think we were eloping, most likely, and there'd be a terrific scandal!"

Steve laughed like a boy, his arm tight around her slender shoulders.

"You're Mrs. Grundy, herself, aren't you?" he asked. "But don't you worry, Lovejoy; nobody is going to talk about you. Sheila and I are going to take care of you as far as Minden and see that you get settled there. Then we're going on down to Santa Barbara to stay. Sheila wants to sell her house there if she can."

Lovejoy knew that Sheila Nettles owned a house overlooking the ocean at Santa Barbara and that she had lived in it with her husband she had just divorced.

"No wonder she wants to sell it!" she said with a sharp shuddering movement. "I hope I never set eyes on that house we had in Tudor Road — Tom and I! When I think of all the quarrels and unhappiness—"

"Don't think about them, and please don't talk about them!" Steve broke in. "Let's forget the last two years, Lovejoy. We're back where we were two years ago—and in another six months we'll be married."

It was all very well to say "Let's forget the last two years." But to do it was a far different thing.

You couldn't cut life in slices the way you could cut a cake, and say, "There are two years—and here are two more."

Life wasn't like that. It was all jumbled together, and you couldn't separate it into neat bits any more than you could cut syrup into slices. . . . It was all one.

There was the baby, for instance.

Lovejoy always knew that no matter where she went or how long she stayed the baby would always be as much a part of her as her own heart-beats. She could put Tom aside, but she could never put his baby out of her life.

Worries About Baby

"Little and Sweet!" she said to him when he opened his eyes to this exciting world on Saturday morning. "Little and Sweet, you know I never would leave you with anyone but your Aunt Em and your Daddy, don't you?"

The baby made a small, happy sound and began to pull himself up to the side of the bed. He was always trying to stand on his small feet lately.

"Please don't let anything dreadful happen to you while I'm away, Tommy!," Lovejoy said to him solemnly. "It worries me to think of leaving you, Little Tiny Boy—"

She had forgotten the long hours when she had left him with Hilda and with Norrie Shane while she played bridge or shopped or waited on dark street corners for Steve Oglebay.

"If anything happens to you while I'm away, I'll just die," she went on talking to the baby when she had brought him his bottle.

But, of course, nothing was going to happen to him. Aunt Em's apartment was the safest thing in the whole world for him, and Aunt Em knew everything there was to know about raising babies.

At one that afternoon Tom came to take baby for a ride.

"Want to go along—just to talk over things?" he asked Lovejoy, who opened the front door to him.

"No," she said, shaking her head. "There's nothing for us to talk over. I'm going west to get my divorce, and everything's settled."

His eyes left her face and went straight to the new wardrobe trunk standing in a corner of the hall.

Farewell

"Look here," he said, scowling, "I don't know where you're going for this divorce, and I don't know who's paying for it—but I have my suspicions."

Lovejoy opened her lips to answer him, but he went on:

"And if you think that you and Steve Oglebay are going to get my kid away from me, you're crazy! He can have you if he wants you. But he's not going to have my kid—and neither are you."

Lovejoy's lips curled scornfully.

"You talk like a dime novel!" she sneered. "And now, let me tell YOU something! That child is mine, and no court in the country will take a child away from its own mother unless it has a bad mother. So don't count on having Tommy to brighten your home life after you marry Norrie Shane!"

He did not answer. He turned away from her and took young Tommy from Aunt Em, who had just come into the hall with him.

"Good-by," he said, and went down the short flight of steps that led to the vestibule with Tommy on his shoulder.

"Good-by," Lovejoy answered automatically, and shut the door.

That was their farewell to each other.

Lovejoy was talking to Steve on the telephone when Tom brought the baby back at 2 o'clock.

She heard his voice. But she laid one hand over her ear so that she could hear nothing but Steve's voice.

His car was coming for her at 7 o'clock.

"I won't see you at the station, but Sheila will meet you at the gate, dearest," he told her. "How are you? You're not losing your nerve, are you?"

She laughed at that and hung up the receiver.

Tom is having his lunch upstairs," Aunt Em reported sourly when she came back from the door with Tommy in her arms.

She carried him into the kitchen and fed him his spinach and his orange juice and his milk.

Aunt Em Scolds

And, sitting there, she delivered herself of some things that were on her mind.

"If you two people had just stayed in that little house," she said loudly, so that Lovejoy could hear her in the next room, "there wouldn't have been all this rowing and fussing! You wouldn't have spent all your money on a lot of liquor and cards and jim-crack furniture! It was getting in with all that fly-by-night crowd that ruined you both—"

Lovejoy put her hands over her ears . . . Aunt Em had said that a dozen times before, and she was sick and tired of listening to it.

"You were just like a lot of the people that made so much sudden money during the war a few years back!" Aunt Em was saying when she took her hands from her ears.

They were making ten and twelve dollars a day in the factories—and spending it on silk shirts, if you please! And silk stockings, if you please! And automobiles to ride themselves around in—instead of putting it into the banks!"

Lovejoy got up from the dining room table, where she had been sitting, and went into the bathroom. She turned on the water in the bathtub . . . and mercifully it shut out the sound of Aunt Em's voice saying harsh things that hurt because they were the truth.

She emptied the bottle of verveine bath salts into the steaming water. . . . It was lovely to be able to do it, somehow.

To have enough of everything, at last! she thought, looking ahead into the future. Her future as Steve Oglebay's wife. Not to have to pinch and scrape and save and plan any more! To have plenty of money all the time!

Leaves With Steve

At 5 o'clock a florist's boy brought a square white box to the flat. It was filled with white gardenias and Aunt Em gave a gasp when she lifted them from their tissue paper wrappings.

"They're from Oglebay, of course!" she exclaimed. "Now, ain't that horrible? Sending you a lot of white flowers as if you were a bride goin' away on her wedding trip instead of a woman sneaking out of town for a divorce!"

I wonder what she'd say if she knew that Steve was going west with me, thought Lovejoy and she burst out laughing.

She pinned the flowers on her coat that night when she was ready to leave the flat. They were a bit bridal-looking, she had to admit to herself. But they were vastly becoming.

"The baby is sound asleep," she told Aunt Em as she kissed her goodby. "Please don't give him anything with sugar in it and please make him drink his spinach juice every day whether he wants it or not."

Aunt Em was crying. "If this ain't the craziest thing a woman ever did! Running out west to get a divorce when you could stay right here and get it! I do believe you're planning to marry that Oglebay out there afterward, so help me, Hannah!"

Outside in the dark street an automobile horn honked.

"Here I go!" Lovejoy cried, glad to get away.

But at the door she turned and took a thin packet of envelopes from her handbag. She held them out to Aunt Em.

"These are some letters that belong to Aline Alderson," she said to her. "You'll see that they're addressed to me. But they belong to her. Some man up in South Port writes to her all the time. . . . Please give the letters to Tom and ask him to see that Aline gets them."

Perhaps that would convince Tom, at last, that the South Port letters belonged to Aline and always had belonged to her! Not that it made any difference what he thought about them now!

Catty Cartoons Are Popular, So Here Are a Few Drawn by Fay King

By FAY KING

TODAY I offer for your disapproval some catty cartoons of pretty stars.

Nothing is more difficult than making an ugly picture of a pretty woman.

Catty cartoons seem to be quite popular these days. And it is interesting to note that women are no longer sensitive about them.

Men have never minded how funny the cartoons of them might be, but there was a time when a cartoonist had difficulty to get a woman at a convention or a meeting to let him make a sketch.

It had to be done secretly. They strongly disapproved of it when they saw it in print.

Most cartoonists are men. They made the mistake of cartooning women as they would men.

Love's Reawakening

Lillian Holds the Solution of New Worry

THAT other eyes than mine were closely watching Mary Harrison through dinner was plain to me long before our after-dinner coffee was brought to us. Noel's eyes, of course, were never long absent from the lovely face of his fiancee, but there was no watchfulness in them, nothing save the adoring expression which he cannot hide. Lillian, distrait, patently thinking of her disturbing letter from Helena Brixton, paid no attention whatever to either of the young people, although I knew that if she had known of Jack Leslie's reappearance in the city, she would have put aside her own worries in concern for Mary. But long acquaintanceship with the mannerisms of my husband and Lillian's made me aware that they were subjecting Dicky's young niece to a close scrutiny, though no one unfamiliar with their little ways could have detected their espionage.

But Mary was restless, plainly keyed-up to a high pitch of nervous excitement, and I wondered if subconsciously she felt the scrutiny upon her. She chattered with careless gayety during dinner, but let escape her no syllable of any secret perplexity. When we were back in our apartment, however, she went up to Harry and laid a coaxing hand upon his sleeve.

"Any 'magic carpets' in the well-known breast pocket this evening?" she queried.

It is an expression familiar to all of us, made so by Harry Underwood himself, who always refers thus to the frequent complimentary tickets he receives for plays, lectures and concerts. It has been several years since he was on Broadway, but his old friends have not forgotten him, while his position in the Veritzen organization insures him the attention of the amusement men who did not know him in the old days.

He looked at her with the gravity which always precedes his teasing.

"Why, I don't know. I think I have two or three little things. Let me see."

He drew his wallet out and from it took semeal small envelopes. Selecting one, he extended it to Mary.

"Here's a lecture—a visiting novelist who's going to deliver himself of a few great thoughts upon 'American Books. Why Are They?'"—he said.

"Thank you." Mary dropped an old-fashioned curtsey. "But I know that by heart. Part of my job last year was to listen to high-brow lectures, and there was never one of them with a good word to say for us. I acquired such an inferiority complex that I hung my head every time I passed a book shop with any domestic literature on view. If you don't mind, I'd like to return this to you with undying gratitude and all that, but firm refusal."

"You're an ungrateful minx," he told her, "but I'll try you again. Here's a pair of tickets for a whale of a boxing match, couple of killers — ought to be lovely and gory."

Mary wrinkled an impudent nose at him.

"Do I look like a person who would take candy from a small boy?" she asked. "I can see where you and Uncle Dicky are going to spend the evening."

"Guilty, as charged, your honor," he returned, "that is if our spouses can be coaxed to 'ope' the west gate and let us gae free.'"

"Your spouses will be 'well rid o' ye deils' for a few hours," Lillian retorted promptly. "And don't tease that child any longer. Give her those tickets you showed me. There's no use playing the polite to Madge or me about them. I know by the very look in my old friend's eye that you couldn't lure her away from this fire tonight for anything less than a Veritzen premiere."

I nodded a smiling corroboration of her dictum, and Mr. Underwood handed a third envelope to Mary.

"Merci, bien," she tossed at him as she took out the tickets. Then she gave a little squeal of joy.

"Oh! you wonderful man! Noel, lookee! That new talkie we were speaking about only yesterday. But we haven't much time. However, we won't need to dress."

Noel hesitated, then spoke hurriedly.

"Do you mind dressing, Mary? I'd rather. I'll hurry."

She looked at him curiously, and a furtive glance of my own told me that his face was flushed with patent embarrassment.

"Of course not," she said with less than a second's delay. "I'm what is known as a 'quick change,' I am. Luckily, I don't have to spend much time deciding on what to wear."

She threw us a gallant little smile and hurried into her own room. But I saw Noel's lips tighten with pain, and knew that he was resenting with youthful fierceness the fate which made it impossible for him to marry Mary out of hand and shower upon her exquisite gowns and jewels to frame her rare beauty.

It was not until after the two had gone that Dicky voiced the query which had come to all of us.

"Why do you suppose Noel insisted upon the 'soup and fish'?"

"I think I know," Lillian said quietly.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Wives—and Ex-Wives

MIDDLE-AGE is the point at which a woman becomes more or less resigned to everything—except the color of hair that the Lord gave her.

After a few years, a married man gets so used to acting on the defensive that if his wife utters a protest when she steps on a tack, he calls it "nagging."

* * *

Even an ex-wife is an inspiration. Many a man has been spurred on to fortune by the thought of the alimony he had to pay.

* * *

A man doesn't have to be a fundamentalist to stick to the old opinion that the aroma of a broiling steak is a sweeter greeting when he comes home tired, than a cold snack in the ice-box and a note on the mantelpiece.

So keen is a man's dramatic instinct that he can automatically swear undying devotion to one woman while he is secretly wondering how he is going to break away in time to keep his engagement with the next woman.

Most men seem to want even a girl's kisses on margin, nowadays. A lot for a little down payment and a conditional promise.

* * *

The whole art of marital happiness consists in treating the person you love best in the world as considerately and politely as you would a casual acquaintance.

There are no limits to what a woman can do with a man—so long as he knows that she can do WITHOUT him!

* * *

Jealously is the ptomaine poisoning of love.

Keep Onion in Place

Onion is one thing that should be kept in its place. In company with congenial foods it is of flattering importance, but when it comes in contact with butter and delicate foods noted for their fastidious tastes, onion is distinctly disagreeable. In order to keep the two types clean cut, rub the knife that has peeled an onion in salt before using it on any other food.

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 23.

SUNDAY'S horoscope is encouraging for social, domestic and cultural pursuits and avocations, but other affairs may be fraught with perplexity and sudden change, although employment is not seriously jeopardized, and may offer emoluments.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of many conflicting conditions. Employment, some business ventures and personal affairs may thrive with wise management.

A child born on this day may be versatile and clever, succeeding best in employment.

Monday, February 24.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is not an entirely propitious one. Pleasant, and possibly unusually lively personal affairs may offset difficult business and financial circumstances.

Those whose birthday it is may find their personal affiliations lively and pleasant enough to negative certain business complications and anxieties.

A child born on this day may be brilliant and have a very interesting career.

NOT SO DUMB

By HELEN KLUMPH

From Marion Davies' forthcoming All-Talking Picture by Wanda Tuchok and Edwin Justus Mayer, based on the play, "Dulcy," by Marc Connelly and George Kaufman.

CHAPTER XVIII.

DULCY curled up in a big arm chair dejectedly and stared into space, recollections of the horrible events of the last few minutes whizzing through her mind like some fantastic merry-go-round.

"Do tell me," Van Dyke said softly, consolingly. "What is the matter?"

"It's Mr. Forbes," Dulcy blurted out through her tears. "He just got angry—for no reason at all, and he won't go ahead with the business deal with Gordon. And now Gordon's mad and he—he doesn't love me any more!

"You mean" — Van Dyke paused significantly, adopting a confidential manner toward her. "He won't go ahead with the jewelry merger?"

Dulcy nodded moodily. But the more she thought of it the more preposterous it all became. What did the old merger mean anyway?

"I hope it is all off," she exclaimed, as her courage returned. "Only sixteen and two-thirds per cent. It's ridiculous."

Van Dyke jumped with a sudden inspiration at her mention of this figure.

"Miss Parker—"

She looked up. The tears were all gone and her eyes were shining. She grew happier as he spoke.

"I like your fiance very much, and I'd like to see him beat Mr. Forbes at his own game. Now I've always wanted to take a little flier in the jewelry business. Suppose I finance Mr. Smith—suppose he and I set out to beat Mr. Forbes. How would that be?"

Dulcy could hardly believe her ears. She was close to tears again as she asked, trembling. "You—you really mean it?"

Gordon Stares

"I do," Van Dyke assured her importantly. "I'll put up my check the moment Gordon says the word."

Dulcy was half way to the door, her voice choking in a sound that was half laughter, half sob, as she said to him:

"You've made me the proudest woman in all the world. You'll let me tell Gordon about it, won't you? You see—I introduced you to him, and you're doing all this, and now everything will be all right. He'll see that when everyone else was against him, I helped him."

She fairly flew down the hall to the kitchen, bursting through the swinging door to face a moody Gordon solemnly drinking a highball. The sight of Dulcy smiling, jubiliant, made him feel even worse.

"My God, are you smiling?" he asked in a funereal tone.

"Oh, Gordie, I've got the most wonderful news for you," she began.

But Gordon only stared at her unbelievingly.

"Dulcy, how can you act like that? After all that has happened! I thought maybe we could patch things up, but it's impossible. I don't understand you. This thing is too big that has come between us."

"Wait, Gordie, wait," she urged breathlessly.

And then she told him the wonderful news. Incredulous at first, he was almost hysterical with joy when the realization of all that it meant came to him.

With shaking hand he poured another drink, a stiff one, and gulping it down started for the hall.

Talk With Forbes

"Now Mr. Forbes," he announced with a world of assurance and elation, "You'll hear a word or two from me."

On the way upstairs he was just behind Van Dyke. He tried to thank him, to pin him down to details to make sure that Dulcy had everything straight, but Van Dyke disposed of the whole affair airily, as though it were a trifle of no importance.

"I'll put up the necessary capital, never fear," he said as he reached his door. "Glad to help you in this little matter."

When Gordon pounded on Forbes' door a moment later the house resounded through the house and Dulcy looked on from below, delighted.

"Do I understand you have definitely called off our proposition?" Gordon asked grimly as Forbes came to the door, rubbing his eyes sleepily.

"Well, perhaps not definitely," Forbes hedged, "but there will be no 16 2-3 per cent in it for you," he added with the air of a man who has his enemy down and is going to make him cry for mercy.

"You're all wrong about it's not being off," Gordon told him belligerently. "I've decided that Schuyler Van Dyke is going to back me, and I'm going to give you the fight of your life because you tried to take advantage of me. You knew I was in a hole. Well, we're going to dig a good big one and put you in it now. You're going to get a first rate licking."

Dares Gordon

Even when half asleep, and after a day of constant annoyances, Forbes was not a man to be intimidated. Defiantly, he dared Gordon to go ahead, though the name of Van Dyke had noticeably impressed him.

But having shot his bolt Gordon had rushed downstairs again, eager to clasp Dulcy in his arms and beg her forgiveness.

"Gordie, darling, you were wonderful," she murmured, as she buried her head on his shoulder. "You see I am of some use after all."

"Use! You were wonderful!" he murmured, kissing her eagerly. "Bringing Van Dyke here was an inspiration. You're going to be the best little wife in the world. I owe everything to you. I'll never try to do anything without your help again."

For a few blissful moments they sat there, clinging to each other, eager to forget the misunderstanding of an hour before. They would never quarrel again, they promised. Their voices had dropped to a constant murmur of "I love you" and "I love you, too," when the doorbell rang shrilly.

"You'll have to answer, Gordie." Dulcy jumped up and smoothed her hair. "Perkins isn't here. Who do you suppose it could be at this time of night?"

An utter stranger was revealed when the door was opened. A tall, good-looking man, of considerable dignity. He seemed worried.

Attorney Calls

He didn't look like the sort of man who would come bursting into a stranger's house at midnight. His whole manner inspired confidence.

"May I speak to you a moment, Miss Parker, on a rather important matter?"

Dulcy nodded and let him into the living room. She felt a sort of nameless dread clutching at her heart, and she drew close to Gordon and slipped her arm into his.

"My name is Patterson—Blair Patterson."

Dulcy and Gordon nodded. Everyone knew of Blair Patterson, the attorney.

"I was referred to you by one of your neighbors, Mrs. Kennedy. She said that you had guests. I just wondered if among them there was a Mr. Morgan."

Dulcy shook her head.

He asked if there was a Mr. Ford, or a Rockefeller, or a Vanderbilt there. Bewildered at first, Dulcy began to be amused as he rattled off the names of the prominent financiers in the country. He must be joking to suggest that they would be visiting her simple little home.

But Patterson was very serious.

"Haven't you a guest," he asked gravely, "who is tall, rather good looking, interested in golf and a brilliant piano player? One who is interested in various investments in a big way?"

Van Dyke Insane

Before he had finished Dulcy was nodding proudly.

"You must mean Schuyler Van Dyke. He's here."

"Yes—yes, I do mean Schuyler Van Dyke," Patterson began slowly, weighing his words as though it were difficult for him to go on.

"I'm his cousin. And I've come for him."

Dulcy and Gordon were frankly puzzled. They didn't want to offend Blair Patterson, but it was odd for him to walk in and announce that he was going to take their guest away.

"His real name is Patterson," the stranger explained reluctantly. "I happen to represent the Van Dyke interests and that is probably where he got the name. He has hallucinations. Thinks he's a millionaire. Goes around forming big companies. But he is perfectly harmless, I assure you."

For once Dulcy was speechless. She could only twist her handkerchief around and 'round in her hand and utter a cry of anguish.

"If he is already asleep, it would be safer not to awaken him," Patterson went on. "And I will have to beg your permission to stay here, somewhere near his room so that I can watch him and see that he doesn't elude me again."

Without a look at Gordon, dully, mechanically, she led Patterson upstairs.

The glittering mansion that she had helped Gordon to build was only a house of cards, after all. What could she do?

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Live Wisely and Win Clear, Perfect Skin

IT IS amazing how few faces show anything like perfect skin. You may look around you and see a surprising number that are not really clean. It is not until you really experiment a bit to find out for yourself how much dirt and grime can accumulate on the complexion that you are convinced that one face can hold so much.

DR COPELAND

Cleanliness of the skin is absolutely essential to good health. The face, and every part of the body, should be washed with a soothing, mild soap and plenty of warm water every day. The face should be washed much more than once a day, particularly if you live in the city. The dirt and bacteria of the air are constantly falling on the face and lodging there. The natural oil of the skin catches and holds them.

The skin is a protection to the machinery of the body, the machinery that does the hourly and daily work of life. A clean skin is essential to the physical welfare. It must be kept in good condition if we are to have good health.

The skin is the point of discharge of many of the wastes and poisons of the body. They are gotten rid of through the moisture and perspiration. If the pores of the skin are clogged up with dirt, then ventilation and the life processes are retarded.

There is no doubt that many persons use the wrong kind of soap. A too strong soap is bad for the skin. It contains an excess of alkali, and dissolves the necessary oils of the skin. Some persons do not use any soap. Yet it is impossible to clean the skin properly without the use of soap.

After thoroughly washing the face, it is well to massage into the skin a good cold cream. Then wipe it off, in order to remove any deep-seated dirt from the pores of the skin. It should not be washed off. Enough of the oil is then left on the skin to nourish the tissues, and to keep the skin flexible.

The skin has a certain amount of oil to make it impervious to infection from bacteria from without. But you are not safe from infection of one kind or another unless you do keep the skin perfectly clean.

For the face, especially, as I said before, a mild soap is the best to use. In winter, if very warm water is used on the face, it is wise to apply cold water before wiping the face, if one is going out-of-doors immediately. In this way, "the pores of the skin are closed" and chapping is not apt to follow.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Inaugural Dinner Guest

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When attending an inaugural dinner and ball (not presidential) is it correct to wear long white kid gloves during dinner and dance, or should I remove them before going to the dining room? My escort is wearing a Tuxedo. Dinner is at eight. C. V. S.

WEAR your long white gloves to the dinner table and remove them before you begin to dine. Do not turn back the glove, turning in the hand part and leaving the arm part. Take off the entire glove. Then, if you wish (and it would be better at such a formal occasion) put your gloves on for the dance.

To be strictly correct, again for such a formal occasion, the gentleman should wear a tail-coat, rather than the informal dinner-jacket.

Tea Wagon Service

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In a servantless home is it correct to serve vegetables from a tea wagon at an informal dinner? ELSIE.

YES.

The Family Letter-Paper

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Will you please advise me whether, on monogrammed stationery, where there are two or more in the family, the last initial is used?

2. Also, what is proper for the envelope seal?

It has been suggested that the first initial should be used where there are two or more of the same name, and, as I am about to re-order my stationery, I am quite anxious to know just what is proper. S. G.

IF each member of the family has her or his own letter-paper, the individual monograms are used—R. E. G. G. E. G., T. R. G. and so forth. But if one kind of letter-paper is to serve for use for all the members of the family, the last initial must, of course, be used, if initialed paper is to be used. However, the best way to solve this family problem of letter-paper is to have the paper engraved with the street address. This makes the best-looking and most logical family paper.

2. The street address may also be used for the envelope flap. I believe that the address letter paper will solve all your problems.

SACONY PLANS MERGER WITH VACUUM OIL

Assets of Over Billion Combined by Move; Will Test Legality.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The first attempt to merge units of the parent Standard Oil Company since its dissolution under United States Supreme Court decree in 1911 was before stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company today.

In identical letters the stockholders were informed that they will not be asked to take action on the consolidation contract until the legality of the merger has been passed upon by the courts.

The letters said that, while counsel for the companies have given their opinion that the proposed merger is within the law the government has been informed of the plan and has indicated its intention to institute proceedings in equity to determine the questions involved.

ASSETS OVER BILLION

The plan calls for the creation of a company to be known as the General Petroleum Corporation which will acquire the assets of the Standard of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company.

The new company would have a market value of $1,100,000,000 on the basis of current quotations for the two stocks, which would make it second only to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey the market value of which is computed at $1,540,000,000 on current quotations.

To preserve the trade name Socony and other goodwill assets of the two companies, subsidiaries to be known as the Standard Oil Company, Inc., and the Vacuum Oil Company, Inc., would be formed. Each would maintain its present producing and distributing organization.

Consolidation would be effected by giving three shares of stock in the new company of shareholders of Vacuum stock for each share surrendered. Standard of New York would receive share for share.

Standard of New York, in addition to its distributing and refining facilities, which include a large fleet of tankers, has producing fields operated through its subsidiary, Magnolia Petroleum, in the mid-continent and Southwestern fields and through a subsidiary, General Petroleum Corporation of California, similar properties on the Pacific coast.

FOREIGN COMPETITION

In the foreign field Standard of New York has been in sharp competition with the Royal Dutch Shell interests in the Orient and India in marketing gasoline and other petroleum products while the Vacuum Company has established markets for the distribution of lubricants in Australia, Asia, Egypt, South, East and West Africa and parts of Europe.

Dividend Increase By Coca Cola Expected

NEW YORK, Feb. 22. In view of another record breaking year in 1929 by Coca Cola Company it is confidently expected that when directors meet for dividend action at the beginning of forthcoming week rate on common stock will be increased to an annual basis of $6 a share. These shares have been receiving dividends at rate of $4 per annum since the spring of 1929, following a 100 per cent stock dividend to common stockholders in the form of class "A" shares, paying $3 annually.

Since the issuance of class "A" stock company has purchased in open market or direct from holders approximately 20 per cent of the 1,000,000 shares outstanding. These purchases are represented in balance sheet at a cost valuation to company of $9,433,732. It is understood management will continue to make purchases of class "A" stock until entire issue has been retired.

KNOWN FOR 75 YEARS

Even before the Civil War when the West knew the covered wagon—and alert health was the first law of survival—the fame of Mountain Valley Spring drew pioneers and settlers great distances across mountain and prairie.

Before shipment of Mountain Valley mineral water to all parts of America was arranged, visitors to Hot Springs, Ark., had spread the story of its virtues.

Now this product of nature's subtle chemistry is nationally accepted as an aid to well-being.

It is distributed by the Mountain Valley Springs Company.

GENERAL TRADE LOWER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Commercial transactions during the week ended February 15, as reflected by data on check payments, were lower than in either the preceding week or the corresponding period of 1929, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce. Steel plant operations during the latest reported week were on a higher level than in the previous week, but showed a decline from a year ago. The output of bituminous coal was lower than in either the previous week or the same week of the preceding year. Petroleum output was greater than in the previous week, but showed a decline from a year ago. Wheat receipts for the latest available week as well as receipts of cotton, cattle and hogs, were lower than a year ago.

The general level of wholesale prices showed a decline as compared with both the previous week and the same week of 1929. Cotton prices averaged higher than in the previous week, but were lower than a year ago; prices for iron and steel were unchanged from the previous week, but were lower than last year, while prices for copper were unchanged from either prior period.

Bank loans and discounts at the end of the week were lower than at the end of the preceding week, but showed a gain over last year. Business failures were less numerous than in the previous week, but were larger than a year ago. Prices for stocks were higher than in the previous week, but were below the level which prevailed in the corresponding period of 1929. Bond prices showed a further fractional gain over the previous week, but were lower than a year ago.

MILD INCREASE IN STEEL OUTPUT

Ingot Production During Week Placed at 80%; Buying Turns Dull

By B. E. V. LUTY

Increase in steel buying, which was marked in January, has been comparatively small this month and possibly there was no increase at all in the past week. There have been decreases in some lines, but probably no decrease in the sum total.

As production follows buying, it has continued to increase, though in only a mild way in the last couple weeks. Steel ingot production in the past week has been in the neighborhood of 80 per cent. Ingot production underwent an increase of 21 per cent from December to January. A fair estimate is that the official report for this month will show about 10 per cent increase over the January rate, or about 15 per cent under February of last year and close to the average in February of immediately preceding years.

PRESENT RATE HIGH

The steel producing rate appears to be rather a high one relative to the present state of general industrial and building activity, hence one should be conservative as to expecting further improvement for the remainder of the year. Seasonal improvement on account of weather conditions is certainly to be expected for the nearby future. The whole year may average about the February rate, but as that would be a violation of precedent substantial reasons must be found for expecting it. The February excess over the year's average was 10 per cent or more in 1925 and 1927, while in other years there was a smaller excess, but still an excess.

Prospects of large improvement in steel production are handicapped, so to speak, by the fact that in important respects the steel movement is very heavy at present and has more chances of decrease than increase. Rail production is close to maximum and is always lighter in the second half of a year. The agricultural implement industry is operating at close to capacity, probably better than its average in the second half of last year. Structural fabricating shops have been very well booked right along, but may have a slight increase in operations on account of weather conditions. Freight car shops were as well provided with orders last year as they are now.

GAINS EXPECTED

It is in the remainder of the field that increases can be expected. Hardly any line pipe is being produced now, while last year was a big year in line pipe and much business is expected eventually for this year, while there may be a little increase in drilling over the present very low rate. In general building operations requirements in standard pipe, rails, sheets, reinforcing bars, etc., should certainly increase.

That pools are operating in practically all of the hosiery stocks.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

GOVERNMENT IS BIGGEST BUSINESS

Public Works Director Reviews Function of His Department in City

By EDWARD G. LANG

Government, local, county, state and national, is the most important and is administered at a greater outlay of money than any other business in the world. Men elected and appointed to serve in a public capacity should have the training and experience necessary in order to meet the many obligations that devolve upon one who assumes the duties and responsibilities of public office.

In order that these requisites may be met in full measure there are three essential requisites necessary so that the economic life of the public be satisfied and the greatest measure of return may be had for the money expended in the functioning of such government.

The first requisite for a public servant is an honesty of purpose with no ulterior motive than that of giving the very best that he or she possesses in return for the compensation paid for such service.

The second qualification necessary is an understanding of the details of government so that by training, experience and contact with public affairs the laws and customs essential in meeting the needs of the public can be assured and appointment or election to any public office be fully justified.

COURAGE NECESSARY

The third requisite is courage and determination to stand for the things that are right without regard to influence or the importunities of friends that might swerve one from the path of duty as he or she understands such obligations so that in the judgment of the writer these are the three essential and absolute necessary qualifications for one aspiring to public office and should be met in the greatest measure that it is humanly possible to do.

The activities of the Department of Public Works of a great city are so vast, of such great variety and so broad in scope that no one article could give anything like an adequate idea to the public who pay the bills, of the demands and necessities of the hundreds of thousands of people who comprise our population.

The Department of Public Works of the City of Pittsburgh is composed of 10 bureaus, these bureaus having underlying them 14 divisions. To operate these bureaus together with the many divisions comprised in them requires an outlay in budget appropriation of over $7,000,000 per year. This, of course, does not include contract work covering the various lines of activity in the department, which during the past four years has entailed an expenditure of from $4,000,000 to $8,000,000 each year in addition to that expended for budget appropriations, which in the general sense is termed overhead.

ACTIVITY VARIED

Inasmuch as the activities are so varied and so broad each separate bureau will be discussed from time to time so that the people who should understand the details of their government will have a broader knowledge and a more concise understanding of that which they pay taxes for and which they have a right to have expended in the most efficient and economic manner.

These articles will appear from time to time and we are hopeful that the people generally will show an interest, for only as they are familiar with the affairs of government will they give of their time, encouragement and help to those who are called upon to administer government so that a greater measure of prosperity, progress and success be meted out to the body politic throughout the length and breadth of this land.

Director

EDWARD G. LANG

Mr. Lang, director of public works who explains the working of his department in the first of a series of articles today.

WINDOW GLASS INACTIVE

The window glass industry does not present any encouraging aspects for the week as a whole, says the National Glass Budget. Those engaged in it—either as manufacturers or distributors—have been living in hope that each coming week would find conditions showing improvement, but have been regularly disappointed, and designating it as slow is a mild form of expressing the week's conditions.

There has been more than the usual seasonal curtailment of production and still the demand does not nearly equal the amount produced.

No change may be noted in the plate glass situation. The slowness in it is credited to the lowered activity in the automobile industry. It, however, presents one contrast with window glass in that a noticeable improvement is anticipated by April 1, 1930, if not before that time.

Very similar comment may be made concerning rough rolled and wired glass.

STANDARD GAS BUDGET

The board of directors of Standard Gas and Electric Company has recommended for approval by boards of directors of subsidiary companies a construction budget for 1930 totaling $60,213,049, according to Halford Erickson, vice president in charge of operation, Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation.

Of the amount indicated, $20,342,619 is for the completion of construction work started prior to January 1, 1930, and approximately $9,712,178 will be expended for extensions to serve new business.

Important construction projects provided for in the Standard Gas and Electric Company budget for 1930 include the erection of important transmission lines by San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric Company, Wisconsin Valley Electric Company and Wisconsin Public Service Corporation, the construction of five large substations by Duquesne Light Company, and the enlargement by Northern States Power Company of a number of its electrical substations. Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company will construct a service building in Oklahoma City and will begin work on the construction of a 66 kilovolt distribution power loop around Oklahoma City with necessary switching stations. Northern States Power Company will erect a new office building in St. Paul.

Larger Vegetable Crop Is Indicated

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Present indications are that the Florida vegetable crop this year will be larger than last year. The citrus fruit crop in Florida in the past season was considerably smaller than in the 1928-1929 season, but the quality of the crop has been better than last year, and it is expected that growers will obtain more revenue from this year's crop than from last year's.

Rio Grande Refuses Offer by Sinclair

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—Los Angeles officials of the Rio Grande Oil Company confirm reports that the negotiations between Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and Rio Grande Oil Company have been halted and that the offer made by Sinclair was not favorable to Rio Grande.

L. M. Lockhart, vice president of Rio Grande, states that the company is in position to pay 50 cents quarterly as dividends, but does not anticipate any stock dividends this year.

Columbia Pictures Net Profit Gains

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

RESULTS of the past seven months indicate that Columbia Pictures Corporation wil carry out the predictions made last November by officials of the company. At that time it was intimated that net profits for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, were expected to reach $1,000,000. This would be equivalent to $9.25 a share on the 100,000 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends.

If earnings come up to expectations they will be nearly double the net profit of $551,822 or $4.77 a share earned in the year ended June 30, 1929. This, in turn, more than doubled profits of the preceding fiscal year of $249,931 or $1.75 a share.

Within a short time the company is expected to report profit of $2.50 a share for the quarter ended December 31, the second of the fiscal year. In the three months ended September 30, 1929, net profit was $227,048 or $2.08 a share.

Gain Shown for Half Year

THE estimated net return of $530,000 for the six months ended December 31, 1929, was only slightly smaller than the profit for the entire preceding fiscal year which was the greatest in the company history.

The most impressive thing about the operations for the present year is the large profit shown for the quarter ended with September. Normally this is the least profitable period of the year. The sales season for the motion picture industry starts in July and for this reason the company places a large number of its biggest feature pictures on the market at that time. Heavy depreciation is charged against these during the first quarter although the maximum period of earnings is not reached until later in the year.

Seasonal Slump Overcome

THE explanation of the large earnings for the first quarter of the present fiscal year is found in the fact that many of the older releases continued to draw heavy receipts. This offset the bookkeeping losses of the company's seasonably dull period. Net profit of $227,048 for the quarter ended September 30, 1929, compared with a loss of $22,441 in the corresponding months of the preceding year.

Since the latter quarters of the fiscal year are normally the most profitable, company officials are inclined to believe that earnings of $4.58 a share in the first half of the fiscal year will be easily exceeded in the second half.

Low Costs Secured

THE rapid growth in earnings during recent years is due to the improved quality of the pictures being made and to the extremely low production costs secured through an able management.

In addition, the past year has been an exceptionally good one for the motion picture producing industry. The talkies have increased theater patronage in this country and foreign sales have also grown to an unprecedented level.

Columbia is the largest independent in the motion picture industry.

NEW YORK PRODUCE EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Trading was quiet on the Produce Exchange tonight and price changes were negligible. The usual leaders, including Associated Gas and Electric common, Chatham Phenix Allied International, Northern Texas Corporation, Tri-Utilities Corporation, Bank of United States units sold off.

TOM GERUN AT WM. PENN

Tom Gerun, well known orchestra leader on the Pacific coast who is credited with being the originator of a new mode in dance music, has just opened an engagement at the William Penn Hotel.

His fame has been spreading rapidly to all quarters of the country. The radio and his Brunswick recordings are making him known in the remotest corners. BUSINESS QUIET DURING WEEK

Retailers Buying Only For Current Needs; Taxi Strike Is Factor

The general trade conditions has shown comparatively no change during the week, business being quiet as a rule with both jobbers and retailers and there are still some unfavorable aspects in the local business situation. The strike of taxicab drivers, which has prevailed for the past five weeks has had an unfavorable effect and there is still considerable unemployment in other lines.

Buying on the part of retailers is generally for current needs and the general volume is below that of the corresponding period of last year. Thus far this year building permits have been considerably lower than a year ago and demand for lumber and other building materials is naturally slow.

INDUSTRY HIGHER

While industrial operations show a slightly higher average rate they continue to be considerably lower than last year. Steel mills in this district are estimated to be operating at about 80 per cent of capacity, with orders principally for immediate requirements, although two or three lines are fairly well booked ahead.

Demand for electrical equipment has been well maintained and manufacturers are still operating at a very fair rate. There is no material improvement in demand for sanitary equipment, which still continues slow.

Production of window glass continues at an unusually low level, probably below 500,000 boxes this month, but this is more than ample to meet current demands. Plate glass production shows little change, with demand slightly improved.

OIL PRODUCTION

Crude oil production has shown no decided increase and prices paid for same have been reduced not only in Pennsylvania but also in the western fields. Attempts are still being made to curtail production, the present prices not being profitable to producers.

Production of bituminous coal has shown a slight falling-off, demand is quiet and prices continue unsatisfactory. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted per net ton, at mines, as follows: steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 cents to 90 cents, and gas slack $1.00 to $1.10.

ARRANGE RALLY ON CITIZENSHIP

The citizenship rally to be held at the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall tonight promises to be the largest gathering of its kind ever held in Western Pennsylvania. The rally is an annual affair sponsored by the American Citizenship League of Pittsburgh in conjunction with the Pittsburgh Welfare Fund, United States Bureau of Naturalization, Pittsburgh Board of Public Education, Parochial Schools of Pittsburgh, Daughters of the American Revolution and Sons of the American Revolution.

F. J. Kress

Robe Carl White, assistant secretary of labor, will be the principal speaker. F. J. Kress, president of the American Citizenship League of Pittsburgh, also will deliver an address.

Many civic and welfare agencies are interested in citizen training, co-operating with the schools which offer free instruction to the prospective citizens or with federal courts which give them legal standing. But the league has undertaken to help new Americans to find schools, to know and to meet the requirements of formal naturalization, and to open the way for their participation in community life.

DRY AGENTS RAID CLUB

Refused admittance to a club on the second floor of a building at 927 Liberty avenue, prohibition agents were forced to break down a door to gain entrance to the establishment. The proprietor escaped while they were breaking into the place, the agents reported. A quantity of whisky and gin was confiscated, it was reported. Three patrons, found in the place, were released.

John Williams, 21, of Moon Township, was arrested when agents visited his home last night and reported finding two 125-gallon stills. John Greenwalt, of Powell road, Wilkins Township, was arrested when a 200-gallon still was found in his establishment, the agents reported.

The prohibition agents also raided residences in Baldwin and Hampton Townships. Stills of 50 gallons capacity were found in each place, it was reported.

Man Is Stabbed Following Argument

Although suffering deep stab wounds on the head, back and arms, Walter Hassler, 41, of 1574 Nixon street, North Side, early today staggered four blocks to the Presbyterian Hospital where he applied for medical attention. Fifteen stitches were required to close the wounds.

Hassler told police he had engaged in an argument with a man he had met a few hours previous and that the man attacked him in Sampson street. Hassler's heavy overcoat saved him from being more seriously injured, it was said at the hospital. He refused to say what the argument was about.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

YESTERDAY'S FINAL QUOTATIONS

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(AP.)—The curb market turned dull and irregular today, with leading utilities inclined to rally. Bullish confidence appeared to have suffered a blow from yesterday's reaction, but bears were not anxious to extend their short commitments to carry over the Saturday holiday and Sunday. Price changes were narrow, mostly limited to a point or less.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

Lindbergh Is Now More of a Business Man

By B. C. FORBES

COL. LINDBERGH is becoming more and more of a business man. He is learning the value of the right kind of publicity in furthering business projects. Newspaper reporters and protographers have lately noted a change in his attitude towards them, whereas he used to give them short shrifts, he has now become approachable.

If Lindbergh goes after the establishing of a record glider flight—that is, flying without motor power—he probably will succeed. Perhaps you didn't know that he possesses phenomenal physical strength. He can lift and carry objects far beyond the ability of the ordinary man. One of his characteristics is that he doesn't like to be "waited on," but cheerfully does his own chores. For this reason—as well as for the additional one that he is unusually generous—he is extremely popular with servants and other help who come into intimate contact with him.

PERFUMED shoes: this is the latest wrinkle to stimulate sales, said Roger A. Selby, president of the Selby Shoe Company of Ohio, author of the idea:

"We shoe manufacturers have been doing our best to appeal to the eye. We have appealed to the touch, too, by making our shoes as smooth and as soft as possible. And, of course, we have always stressed quality. My idea now is to appeal to one more sense, the sense of smell. We tried out our new product at Hollywood and it immediately caught on with movie stars. We are now introducing it in New York and in other fashion centers. Motor manufacturers have taught all of us the value of introducing some thing new in the way of sales appeal."

Mr. Selby, although the youngest of four brothers all brought up in the family's 50-year-old business, was voted into the presidency after he had had outside business experience. He has developed it into a $20,000,000 institution employing 3,000 men and women and producing an average of close to 10,000 pairs of women's and children's shoes daily. When he first took hold, the older heads invariably protested against expensive innovations, ch[illegible]

"[illegible] we have been doing it this way for 30 years; you better let well enough alone."

Any idea which meant a saving of one cent per shoe amounted to something like $200 a day. Young Selby startled old-fashioned shoe men by establishing a research laboratory. He declares it has paid handsomely.

Have you heard about the Czechoslovakia wizard, Bata, who is swamping this country (and other countries) with cheap shoes, produced at much lower cost than is possible here? Bata sent picked men to every important American shoe factory to learn specific operations, also his brainiest engineers. In due course, he built shoe-making machines patterned after America's and installed American production methods throughout his plant.

Until Bata's advent our shoe manufacturers enjoyed a monopoly. Thus, no tariff existed. Now shoe manufacturers want a tariff to offset Bata's extraordinarily low labor costs. Unlike American manufacturers, Bata doesn't even have to pay a royalty on his shoe-making machinery. The latest information from Czechoslovakia is that Bata is raising his output from 50,000 to 70,000 pairs daily and is planning for 100,000 pairs daily this year. The fellow must be a genius.

ONE more straw showing how the wind has been blowing since the stock panic: President Irenee Du Pont, of the Du Pont Company, writes me:

"During last year, the number of common stockholders increased by 15,000, or 155 per cent over the number at the end of the previous year. It is of especial interest that during the last two months of the year there was a increase of approximately 5,350 in the number of common stockholders."

During 1929 common stockholders jumped from under 11,000 to 25,476.

USING taxpayers' money to buy farm commodities above the market price is a daring, not to say dangerous, experiment. No business concern would do it, of course. But neither would any business concern levy a tariff on imports needed by it. Chairman Alexander Legge of the Farm Board has tackled an infinitely more complicated job than running the International Harvester Company.

In fact, the United States government has become the arch-speculator — gambler — in commodities. If prices go up, the government may not lose tremendously. If prices go down, it will. Brazil succeeded for years in "pegging" coffee at a high price. Then came disaster. Perhaps our government's attempt to keep up commodity prices will prove more successful. If it does, students of economics will be confounded. They predict ultimate trouble.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

YESTERDAY'S QUOTATIONS

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The bond market gave another dull exhibition today. Liberties and treasury certificates again sold higher and a few high-grade rails drew sufficient support to hold them at about the level of Thursday's close, but for the most part the list was stagnant.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows. 000 omitted in sales column. (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

by JAMES J. LONG

Baseball Coaches Shift. Year of Many Changes. Getto Captures Kansas.

Squash Racquets Boom. Vance Is Signed. White's Dream Ended.

BIG LEAGUE PILOTS SIGN NEW AIDES

WITH seven of the 16 major league baseball clubs having changed managers since the close of last season, it was to have been expected that there would be a wholesale shake-up in the coaching ranks for the 1930 pennant races. This for the reason that a new pilot generally desires to have at least one coach of his own choosing, an assistant who may be depended upon to work hand in hand with him and carry out his policies.

Ivan Olson

The list of coaches has been completed with the signing of Ivan Olson by the Brooklyn Club and the changes are as numerous as anticipated. Rarely have so many shifts been made in a single season. With Jewel Ens moved up to the managership, the Pirates have taken on Max Carey, from the Dodgers, to work with Oscar Stanage. The Giants have replaced Ray Schalk and Bert Niehoff with Dave Bancroft, ex-Robin, and Irish Meusel. Schalk, dropped by the Giants, has supplanted Grover Land as Jimmy Burke's running mate on the Cubs. Mike Doolan, formerly of the Cubs, has gone to the Reds with Otto Williams, and Ivy Wingo has stepped down. Olson's partner on the Dodgers will be Otto Miller. George Sisler becomes a coach for the Braves, paired with Hank Gowdy, and Johnny Evers goes on the road as a scout. The Cardinals have enrolled Ray Blades to take Greasy Neale's place, and the Phillies continue with Fred Hunter, the only National League club to stand pat.

FOUR of the American League clubs have retained their old coaches. The Athletics again present Kid Gleason, Eddie Collins and Earl Mack. The Yankees keep Art Fletcher and Charley O'Leary. The Senators stick to Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, and the Indians will continue with Grover Hartley and Howard Shanks.

All of the others have made changes. Roger Bresnahan succeeds George McBride on the Tigers to divide the coaching duties with Benny Meyer. Bernard (Mike) Kelly relieves old Ed Walsh on the White Sox. Russell Blackburne, deposed White Sox manager, moves over to the Browns to serve with Jimmy Austin, and Jack McCallister has been engaged for the coaching job on the Red Sox formerly held by Heinie Wagner, now manager.

THE great showings made by University of Pittsburgh football teams from year to year have created a wide demand for the services of Panther players as college coaches in various parts of the country following their graduation.

And almost without exception, they have made good in impressive style. Still another may now be added to the long list of successful ones in the person of Mike Getto, who ended his playing career here as the star right tackle of the Blue and Gold eleven of 1928.

Mike Getto

THE Jeannette boy became a coach at the University of Kansas in Lawrence last fall, and that he is looked upon as a real hero there may be judged from the following paragraph in a letter received by W. Dan Harrison, director of athletics at Pitt, from Forrest C. Allen, who holds a similar post at the Kansas institution: "I want to tell you how happy we are in having Mike Getto with us. He is a wonderful chap. He has taken Lawrence by storm. His earnest manner and his straightforward personality have captivated our university and our college town." Quite a tribute to the kind of stuff Pitt turns out. It is evident that Getto hasn't disappointed his many friends hereabouts, who felt confident that he would make good in a big way as coach just as he had done as a player.

PITTSBURGH in recent months has witnessed a remarkable growth in the popularity of squash racquets. The game has won over many former devotees of handball. That this has not been confined to this city, but has been general, is the finding of Allison Danzig, author of a new book called "The Racquet Game," and who has spent years colecting data on the leading four racquet games played indoors—racquets, court tennis, squash racquets and squash tennis.

Danzig reports that more squash racquet courts have been built in the United States in the last two years than in any previous 10 years. Many colleges, universities and even prep schools now have courts, public and private gymnasiums feature them, and so do some apartment houses and office buildings in the large cities. A number of factories have put in courts for their employes, and it is predicted that many of the others will follow in time.

THE four games have so much in common that they may be said to belong to the same family. Each is played with a racquet and a ball, in a roofed, four-walled court, though there is a difference in the dimensions and not all are of the same material.

"Each puts as much premium upon physical endurance as any game known to man," Danzig comments. "Ice hockey is probably the only game as fast as racquets or squash tennis, in which the play is sustained at so terrific a clip as to make the fastest game of lawn tennis seem mild in comparison."

FOLLOWING the action of two other Brooklyn baseball holdouts, Val Picinich and Wally Gilbert, in signing their contracts, Pitcher Dazzy Vance also has come in the fold. Vance and the club have effected a compromise by splitting the difference that existed as compared with last year's figures. Dazzy received $25,000 in 1929. The contract offered to him for this year called for $15,000. Vance said he would not sign for less than $20,000, and as soon as the club made the new offer of the latter sum the big pitcher signed and will be on hand when practice is started at Clearwater, Fla., on Monday.

Dazzy Vance

VANCE says he didn't expect the same kind of contract he had last year, but objected to the size of the cut. "Before Douglas McWeeny was traded to the Reds he was given a salary cut of $4,000," Dazzy remarked. "McWeeny won only four games last season. I won 14 for the same team, and yet they tried to reduce my pay to the extent of $10,000. That wasn't a cut. It was an amputation."

"Things over which I had no control were responsible for my so-called poor showing last season. There never was anything wrong with my arm and I believe that in the first three weeks of the season I had more speed than ever before. Illness was the trouble later. Yet while I was sick I pitched games when I should not have been in uniform. I didn't get sick purposely, did I?

"BIG league club owners are always talking about ball players mingling with gamblers, and that makes me laugh when I hear of a player who has signed a bonus contract," Vance added. "What are club owners who sign players to such bonus contracts doing?

"They are gambling with the players who will get so much more money if they win so many games or bat a certain percentage, and yet the same magnates denounce a player if he happens to have a friend who has been known to make bets. Who is there that doesn't

FLOOR LEAD IN BIG FOUR AT STAKE

Probable Lineup

Pitt.	Pos.	West Virginia.
Zehfuss	F	Cubbon
Hyatt (C)	F	Glenn
Cohen	C	Karlovac
Baker	G	Radcliff
Arture	G	Floater

Referee—Dan Brickley. Umpire—Max Hannon.

Francis X (Marks the Spot) Stadsvold and his West Virginia Mountaineers, in the throes of what looks suspiciously like a comeback splurge, appear here tonight against Pitt's Golden Panthers, meeting the Golden Cats in the feature engagement of the collegiate card in the Stadium Pavilion.

Charlie Hyatt

Tonight's program for the tri-state district is unusually light, only two other major games being charted. Westminster entertains Wash-Jeff at New Wilmington in a return battle and Thiel visits Waynesburg. Youngstown Y. M. C. A. is at Latrobe for a clash with St. Vincents. Carnegie Tech, the only other district five with a game to be played meets New York University in Gotham.

LEAD AT STAKE

A flock of prestige and the lead in the Big Four is at stake in tonight's Stadium game. Pitt must down the Mountaineers to make up for the setback suffered at the hands of Francis X and his 'eers a year ago on the local floor, and must also win to keep pace with the fast traveling Dukes, who served West Virginia a decisive trimming in Morgantown about two weeks ago.

Chippah Charleh Hyatt, captaining a Pitt team against West Virginia for the last time in Pittsburgh, is expected to provide the kick of Pitt's attack against the tough Mountaineers, who will counter with a brace of brilliant performers in Little Sleepy Glenn and Eddie Cubbon. Hyatt's supporting cast figures to consist of Eddie Baker, Willie Arture, Paul Zehfuss and Lester Cohen.

Early comers to the Stadium tonight will have the opportunity of seeing a pip of a preliminary tusle as the Pitt freshmen, seeking their fortieth consecutive triumph in three years, meet the rangy and clever Little Mountaineers. This one may be a better game than the varsity.

DUKES BEAT GROVERS

What a hummer we looked at last night, those of us able to talk our way out of the house and into the Dukes' gym! The Dukes made it seven in a row by taking Grove City by a 31-27 score, serving Bob Thorn and his Grovers their second defeat in as many nights.

In a red hot prelim, the West Virginia freshmen team defeated the Duke frosh by a 43-38 count.

Grove City was ahead only twice during the hectic ball game, and may be said to have fouled their way out of a victory. Thirteen out of 21 fouls paved the way for the Duquesne triumph, the quintets finishing all even when it came to field goal getting.

At half time, thanks to a brace of goals by clever Ben Lubic and six successful free throws out of nine attempted, the Dukes enjoyed a 14-10 lead. They held this four-point advantage until midway in the second half, when Bernard Fegley (his name is not Joe) and Marcus Rankin put Grove City on even terms. Rankin put his team out in front, 24 to 22, but Joe Vernon tied it up. It was tied once more at 27-27, but the Duke offense twice worked Ganzy Benedict into the clear, and the only way Grove City could stop him was to foul. This they did, or rather, Red Ryan did, and Ganzy made all four free throws good to establish the locals' winning margin.

GROVERS OUTCLASSED

As per usual, the Grovers banged away from well out on the floor, and had half the shots they attempted been sunk, they'd have won the ball game hands down. The Dukes played with greater finesse, deserving the victory they won.

Fegley, with three field goals and as many fouls, tied for the high scoring honors with Lubic, who dropped in two goals and five out of six free tosses. Fegley tallied all his points during the second half, throwing one goal from the center of the floor that swished through without even nudging the rim.

The lineups:

Dukes—31.		Grove City—27.
Lubic	F	Fegley
Benedict (C)	F	Stavinsky
McGeever	C	Hildebrand
Stephens	G	Rankin
Parry	G	Ryan

Score by periods—Dukes 14-17-31, Grove City 10-17-27.

Substitutes, Dukes—Vernon, Grove City—Raplenovic, Burke, Reeves. Field Goals—Dukes—Lubic 2, Vernon 2, Stephens 2, Parry, Benedict. Grove City—Fegley, 3, Stavinsky 2, Rankin 2, Reeves.

Fouls—Dukes—Lubic, 5 out of 6; Benedict, 6 out of 6; McGeever, 0 out of 2; Stephens, 1 out of 2; Parry, 0 out of 2; Vernon, 1 out of 2. Grove City—Fegley, 3 out of 3; Rankin, 1 out of 2; Ryan, 6

JOE WALCOTT PROVES EASY FOR MALCO

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Tom Malco, of Soho, won as he pleased in his 10-round main bout with Young Joe Walcott, Negro, of Washington, Pa., before a packed arena at the Moose Temple last night.

The rugged, squat Soho favorite carried off every round but the fourth, in which Walcott made his only sustained effort to fight and landed a series of straights to the head. In all of the other rounds Walcott was a mark for Malco's straight left jab to the head and then a merciless hammering of the body in the clinches. He took most of this abuse without making the slightest effort to fight back, and thus put a drab finish to what up to this point had been a great card of bouts for action.

Malco, at 146 pounds, boasted an edge of one pound in weight. There were no knockdowns in the battle, but Walcott was exceedingly tired and bruised about the body at the finish and anxious to hear the final bell.

ZELNACK EXTENDS WILSON

Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, 155¼ pounds, gave Jack Wilson, of Jersey City, 156, an unexpectedly hard fight in the six-round semi-final. He lost the decision, wilting toward the close under the rangy Wilson's body pounding, which included a number of illegal punches smack on the kidneys, but had the satisfaction of mussing up Wilson badly in the early rounds and extending him all the way.

Two weeks ago, in the same ring, Wilson introduced himself to the local fans by knocking out Georgie Chambers, of the East End, in spectacular and easy fashion, in two rounds, and he was a prime favorite to repeat

Vance Accepts $20,000, One-Year Robin Contract

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Arthur (Dazzy) Vance, star righthand pitcher of the Brooklyn Robins, has agreed to sign a one-year contract at a salary of $20,000, the Brooklyn management announced today. Vance, one of the highest paid hurlers in organized baseball, received $25,000 for his services last season.

Vance, whose home is in Clearwater, Fla., where the Robins will hold spring training, telegraphed his acceptance of terms. The Dazzler has been the club's chief holdout, an "honor" now transferred to Babe Herman, the slugging outfielder, who has failed as yet to come to terms.

PIERPOINTS, SWITCH PLAY

Only one soccer game will be played this afternoon for locals to become enthused over. One of the leading games of the District League, featuring the Pierpoint Motors against Union Swith at Swissvale, will be staged. Much depends upon the outcome of this game, and the Switch team must win to stay in the race.

Scotty Burke Loses In Squash Tourney

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Jay McCausland, of Toronto, in the opening match of the individual event of the National squash racquets championship, defeated J. Scott Burke, of Pittsburgh, in straight games 15-10; 10-6; 15-7.

The team championships opened today. The pairings: Baltimore, bye; Detroit vs. Indianapolis; Western (Minneapolis-Kansas City) vs. New York; Buffalo vs. St. Louis; Milwaukee vs. Chicago; St. Paul vs. Philadelphia; Pittsburgh vs. Cleveland.

PERLICK STOPS WHITE IN SECOND

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—The Ghost of Charley White, who came within a punch of winning the world lightweight championship on three distinct occasions, stalked into the ring at the Coliseum last night and was vanquished in two rounds by Henry Perlick, one of the fighting twins from Kalamazoo, Mich.

White, attempting a comeback after seven years' absence from the ring, was beaten into a state of collapse before a towel was tossed into the ring. He was knocked to the floor four times, and was only a shadow of the figure who flourished in dreaded fashion in the regimes of Welch, Ritchie and Benny Leonard.

Women's Swim Title At Stake Tonight

The 100-yard women's junior national breast-stroke title will be at stake in the swimming meet carded in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association pool tonight. Another important event on the program is the 200-yard senior A. M. A. men's free style championship, now held by the P. A. A. swimmers.

The remainder of the program will be a dual meet between P. A. A. and Carnegie Tech.

Smith Takes Lead In Savannah Open

SAVANAH, Ga., Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Horton Smith shot a par-shattering 66 yesterday to take the lead at the halfway mark in the $3,000 Savannah ope golf tournament. His brilliant score gave him a 137. Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, national open king, scored a 75 to tie for fifth at 142.

Latzo Surprises With Win Over Larry Johnson

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP.)—Pete Latzo, one of those game old veterans who never seems to lose his grip, came back to the big battle pit last night and neatly chastized Larry Johnson, a villainous puncher of the younger generation, in a smart, fast 10-round skirmish that furnished 12,000 with one of the major surprises of the indoor season.

Nursing a fractured jaw, broken for the second time by Jimmy Braddock's sock more than a year ago, Pudgy Pete administered an artful lesson to on. of the most savage right-hand punchers in the 175-pound division. He won the decision by the barest of margins, even the judges and referee failed to agree, but he did manage to squeak through, tender chin and all, by the breadth of a round or so.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—The Pirate advance guard reached here this morning at 7:15, Pacific Coast time, and half an hour later the big party was on the last leg of the journey to the Paso Robles training camp. Skipper Jewel Ens expects to dock at the training site at 2:50 this afternoon.

Steve Swetonic

Ens says there will be no workout today. But he has instructed all hands to report at the regular assembly hall for the purpose of getting uniforms. A light practice about noon tomorrow will mark the opening of the preparatory season, the drills to begin in earnest on Monday.

In some respect, the trip of the Pirate ship to sunny California was the most enjoyable the Buccos have taken since the Pittsburghers chose Paso Robels as their training grounds seven years ago. The sun shone practically all the way, adding much to the scenery. The many rookies, in particular, enjoyed the long ride which started in Pittsburgh Tuesday night.

SWETONIC JOINS PARTY

The Sante Fe flyer brought the big leaguers into Los Angeles in a fine manner. Thirty minutes here provided plenty of time to get the athletes from the Santa Fe terminal to the Southern Pacific Station. The final lap is being made aboard one of the crack trains running between Los Angeles and San Francisco. It will make a special stop at Paso Robles in deference to the "Ball Gamers."

Three members of the Pirate family were among the numerous friends who greeted the travelers when they reached the great California resort city. The players were Steve Swetonic, Herbert Sanders, and Ivan Green, all pitchers.

North Side Steve came to Los Angeles several weeks ago in the interest of his profession. He figured that a longer stay in this climate would help to put an edge on him which would stand in his stead throughout the long campaign that begins April 15.

PETTY RECOVERS

Sanders and Green are recruits, although the first-named has had a lot of experience in the Western League. He comes to the Pittsburgh club under a special arrangement. Provided he is retained, a big sum will be put out for his services. He is highly recommended. Green is a semi-pro kid from Phoenix, who will get a trial as a result of a recommendation from George Grantham.

The cross-country tourists enjoyed good health on the long jaunt to California. Jess Petty suffered with a cold yesterday, but he was given treatment and responded. Petty has almost completely recovered from his appendicitis operation. He will have to take things easily at the start of the training period, but he thinks he will be ready to step out when the race starts about seven weeks hence.

Chillysauce

Calisthenics will be a consistent part of the Pirates' training during their stay at Paso Robles. Manager Jewel Ens announced today. The plan which went into effect on the long train ride across the continent looks like a sensible one for any conditioners of athletes to follow.

Skipper Ens or his assistants will put the players through several minutes of this sort of exercise before they jump into the more conventional stuff. As soon as the squad reaches the ball orchard there will be a setting-up drill this to be supervised by a fun aficnado the ball haul. Max Carey and Dr. William L. Marks, the team physician, both are good directors in the form of limbering up stunts and both will be pressed into service.

Ens also let it be known that there would be two workouts a day for the pitchers and catchers once the real work gets under way. In between these sessions will be the ever-popular batting sessions, but only the infielders and catchers will partake of the batting in that until the arrival of the second squad.

BENJAMIN HONORED

One year ago the Pirate batterymen were putting in their time in the same manner as they are today. The advance guard reached Paso Robles on the same date. The infielders and outfielders are due to reach camp one week from tomorrow.

Dan Benjamin, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph photographer, and the only sports writer-man with the Pirate party, had a very enjoyable experience yesterday when the train reached Trinidad. Back in Wales years ago, Dan attended school with a lot of boys who soon afterward cast their fortunes in the coal mine districts of Trinidad. Some of these school chums had not seen Dan for 30 years, so he sent a message to Trinidad and behold, he was greeted by more than a score of old country people. The train stopped for 10 minutes and Dan was the guest of honor at a big feast. Dr. Marks remarked that only one thing was missing, the doctor said he was expecting an outburst of Welsh songs as only the Welsh folks can sing them.

Sport Vignettes

Charley White, the veteran left hook artist of Chicago, who made a widely-ballyhooed comeback effort against Henry Perlick in his home town last night, is reputed to be worth $250,000 . . . Anybody who has that much money ought to have a committee appointed to keep him out of the ring . . . Pittsburgh is to have a sports show in Motor Square Garden April 19 to 26 . . . It will be sponsored by the Izaak Walton League of America and will embrace all of the standard sports. Exhibitions in all lines will be given . . . It will be the first Sports Show ever held here . . . The local basketball fans are being gradually keyed up for the American League game to be played at Duquesne University March 13, between the Cleveland Rosenblums and the Paterson (N. J.) team . . . The Rosies are the greatest "money team" in professional basketball. They have shown it on several occasions when it was necessary for them to come through . . . Like all winning combinations in any line of sport, the Rosies dominate the game when they play it . . . Pop Warner, former Pitt coach, believes that the best defense in football is a great offense . . . A boxer in the ring who carries the fight to his opponent generally has the latter so busy defending himself that he ceases to be dangerous . . . In baseball, the team of sluggers tosses terror into the hearts of the pitchers and fielders . . . By the same token, the Rosies proceed on the theory that all is well so long as they can monopolize possession of the ball . . . Thus, while they do not go in themselves for running up scores, they manage to keep the opposition in check and almost invariably can step out and take the lead any time they get ready for the spurt . . . It is a treat to see the big leaguers play basketball as it should be played, sans the long-distance shooting and endless running around in circles . . . At a banquet tendered Jackie Rodgers, local Negro bantamweight knockout king, a few nights ago, one of the inspired speakers rang in the names of Socrates, Plato and other greats . . . When it came time for James (Red) Mason, new manager of Jackie, to address the guests, he told them he never had heard of either of those two fellows, Socrates and Plato, and couldn't even pronounce the name of the first one, but would let Jackie fight either one at 120 pounds at 3 p. m. . . . The fight that somebody ought to put on is one between Carnera and Campolo to prove which really is the worse of the two oversized heavies . . . However, because it's a logical match, it probably never will be made . . . Whoever heard of a logical match in sports, anyway? The much-Barnumed populace would laugh down the very idea and demand that it be treated in the manner to which it has become accustomed.—HARRY KECK.

The City League basketball race failed to come to a complete stop yesterday by a margin of some 25 points. The boys settled the argument in Section I, Fifth Avenue retaining its title by defeating South, 17 to 15, and is all set to meet the Section II champ, who ever that may be, in the championship series.

FIFTH AVE. SUPERIOR

In Section II, however, Perry tumbled into a tie for the top with South Hills by shellacking Allegheny, 38 to 13. A play-off is now necessary, as was the case a year ago when Oliver and South Hills wound up in a deadlock when the regular season was over. The play-off date has been set for next Tuesday, at the Stadium.

Fifth showed clean cut superiority over South in yesterday's crucial game, and, after the first two minutes of play, was never headed. The Uptowners, led by the brilliant Irving Brenner, held a 9-6 advantage at half time after being tied at 3-all at the end of the first period.

Perry ran away from Allegheny in the feature game of Section II and was never in danger. Oliver closed its season by beating Vocational, 28-27, and Carrick topped Langley, 28-17. In the other Section I contests, Schenley beat Peabody, 44-24, and Westinghouse downed Ralston, 28-21.

Jim Corbett to Size Up Miami Heavyweight Rivals

James J. (Jim) Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, sizes up the chances of Jack Sharkey and Phil Scott in their battle at Miami next Thursday night in a series of three articles in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, beginning Monday. The first article deals with Scott, the second with Sharkey, and the third is a sum-up on the eve of the important battle.

J. J. Corbett

Corbett knows boxing from the angle of the man who revolutionized the sport in America with his show of cleverness in defeating the great John L. Sullivan. He has known all of the great heavyweights from the time of Sullivan. No writer could be better qualified to weigh the prospects of both Sharkey and Scott in an impartial manner.

Don't miss any article of the series, appearing exclusively in the

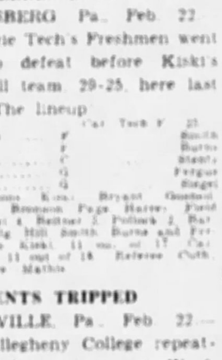
know a gambler. A fellow who doesn't gamble nowadays is hard to find."

WHICHONE AND BOOJUM, outstanding 2-year-olds of America's race tracks in 1929, will not be among the starters in the Kentucky Derby on May 17. Harry Payne Whitney, their owner, has decided to pass up the Churchill Downs classic as far as these two horses are concerned, and will point them instead for the Preakness, Withers and Belmont stakes. He says that inasmuch as the Belmont and other Eastern stakes form his primary aim, he figures that it would be unwise to ship his stars as far as Louisville for what evidently would be a hard race. Though the Derby has more color than any other American turf fixture, the Belmont is the richest of all 3-year-old stakes and is held to be superior to the Derby as a test of stamina and courage. The Belmont is worth $70,000. The Derby averages about $55,000, just a little more than the Preakness. Whichone earned $135,455 last year, ranking second only to Blue Larkspur, with $153,450. Boojum won $57,650. Whitney has five other Derby eligibles of lesser repute in Niato, Hat Broom, Chimney Sweep, Crazy Coat and Gigolo.



Harry Payne Whitney

MORE than the reputation of having been a star in your heyday is required to get you by in the fight game when you have drawn near to the age of 39 and have been out of the ring for six years. Charley White, once feared lightweight with the deadly left hook, learned that to his sorrow last night in Chicago.

White's quick defeat at the hands of Henry Perlick, who stopped him in the second round of their scheduled six-round bout, was not surprising to anyone excepting possibly Charley himself. Fighting at 39 would have been a heavy enough handicap, and six years of idleness killed any chance he might have had otherwise. It just isn't done in such a tough racket as the fistic sport. The spirit may be willing but the flesh is weak.

There's a wealth of harmonious color in the reproductions of famous paintings in tomorrow's Color Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. "Wild Horses," by Robert Wesley Amick, from the Harry O. Eichlay collection, is full of action and color, and is a striking contrast to the "Holland Shore in Winter," by Jules Monnickendam, from the same collection. These reproductions are worthy of frames.

At 9 o'clock WJAS will offer a pageant entitled "George Washington," with incidental music and a narrator.

HEARS ARMY PLANE

Clarence Thompson, 310 Second street, Oakmont, operator of W8AJE, informs us that he picked up the Army plane transmitter AB6 at Selfridge Field, Hartford, Conn., recently. AB6 uses 400 volts of "B" batteries on the plate of a UX210 tube.

These amateurs have lots of fun. While Thompson listened in he heard AB6 talking with W9DRR, W9CVG, W9COS and W4HK (in Tennessee).

Thompson is the boy who carried on a two-way conversation with WFBT, Admiral Byrd's station in Little America, when he used the transmitter of W8AGQ, formerly located in Oakmont High School.

Harriet Lee, contralto and exclusive Columbia artist, is an honorary captain of the One Hundred and Thirty-third Cavalry, Illinois National Guard.

TODAY'S TID BIT.

A radio operator on a ship at sea works but two out of 24 hours a day, according to Arthur Brown, WCAE, who once pounded the key on a freighter. The operator never leaves his bunk except on relief. He must keep the earphones glued to his head listening for calls of other ships.

"CHICKIE"

Munson Insists on Taking Chickie to Dinner

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Chickie Bryce is attending business college when the story opens. Her father Jonathan fears the pitfalls ahead of her, but his wife allays his fears. Chickie gets a position in a brokerage office. Through one of her co-workers, Janina Knowles, she meets Jake Munson, a rich bachelor. Mary Blake, Chickie's closest friend, marries a poor young chemist much to Chickie's regret. Mary's brother Jimmy begs Chickie to marry him, but without success. Chickie meets Barry Dunne at a party given by Munson. She learns that the party is to last all night and Barry takes her home. The next night Barry calls at her home. Barry takes Chickie motoring, tells her she's beautiful and kisses her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

CHICKIE would have liked to let herself lean back, feel Barry's face against hers as she had in that short blissful moment when he had kissed her.

But she didn't, not when they stood at the door. She got into her own room quickly, sat on the bed. The room was dark; she let herself glow, like a flame. She touched her face where his cheek, firm and warm, had pressed a second on hers.

She began to undress, a few [illegible] Suddenly she [illegible] up her dress. Mary's [illegible] walk into [illegible] What's that?

But [illegible] Meant [illegible] girl he was [illegible] make [illegible] about [illegible] "A kiss [illegible] to the [illegible] like a [illegible]

She [illegible] And [illegible] warm [illegible] her like a [illegible] smiling [illegible] window.

She trembled [illegible] than one [illegible] But she had [illegible] battle with [illegible] was the [illegible] been placed [illegible] tion. She [illegible] waiting [illegible] attack.

Janina [illegible] manner. Chickie [illegible] "Good [illegible] pleasant [illegible] tered. Hall [illegible] marty."

Chickie gave her a [illegible] look of [illegible] "You didn't [illegible] Chickie. Make an [illegible] self. Frail [illegible] to ru-in [illegible] kidnap girls in this day and age!"

Janina Angry
Says That She Has Been Wronged by Chickie

There were sharp arrows quivering in her flesh, but she said loftily: "All that sarcasm, Janina, doesn't cover up the contemptible trick you did."

"I did" with a chill note to the prolonged "I. Well, I'd the nerve. I suppose you were drugged and carried off bodily. I suppose I held the package over your nose."

"You could have told me we were to stay all night."

"I didn't know where you thought we were going. Straight away from town. Anyway, Chickie, you did me a rotten trick that I wouldn't dream of doing you. You got me in wrong with the whole crowd. You spoiled the whole affair. And it was a rotten way to treat Jake. You could at least have shouted. Goodby."

She kept this up, going back over it until Chickie felt herself pushed against the wall. She said finally: "Well, I'm sorry. I had to go home. That's all there was to it."

"Oh, you'll be likely to stay home! Don't worry about that. And pulling Barry off with you! Queered yourself there, too."

"Well never you mind about that, Janina."

She went to her desk, too shaken even to glance from the window. Twice during the morning she was aware that he was staring over. She didn't look.

But early in the afternoon, when the sun came streaming like a yellow banner across her typewriter, she stood up, reaching for some papers. She looked down, knowing that he was there. He threw back his head, staring at her and smiling. He drew his lips full out and sweet together. Then he laughed.

He went back to his desk, a buoyant spring in his thoughts. He took a pencil and made a note on the margin of some legal papers. Then he fell to wondering. The dear, beautiful thing—and clever, too. He never expected that.

Barry 'Phones
Asks Chickie to Wait for Him Outside

He could feel her soft hands, he could see her pretty eyes startled when he had suddenly awakened and her lips clinging so gently to his.

More piercingly than this he saw her sitting motionless and unresistant, her hands clasped in her lap. Something appealing and wistful and ever so girlish in the beauty of her face caught him with a strange persistent thrill.

She said she didn't kiss men. Could that be true? A girl with that hair and eyes and dear little mouth like that. No, he couldn't quite believe that. But that old dad of hers, domineering old fellow—kept tab on her.

His heart raced a bit thinking all this. True or not, she was a wonder, a prize different from others; he would meet her as she came from work.

Barry Dunne was a young man—not yet 24—full of ambition. Underneath his happy-go-lucky manner was a strong, [illegible] streak that made him [illegible] sensitive and self-conscious.

He liked girls, but as a boy had suffered miseries because [illegible] red hair and terrible [illegible] in a year. It was a surprise to [illegible] coming into manhood to [illegible] attractive to women. He could not at first believe it was true. He was never certain. He rather enjoyed experimenting, trying out [illegible] charms.

So he had, just days [illegible] before he started to Chicago. For [illegible] was a pleasant and [illegible] man who had played [illegible] gallantly and daringly as [illegible] as possible. He had [illegible] of very cruel ghosts [illegible] closet.

He took the phone called [illegible] asked her to wait just outside the building for him. She tried to keep her voice low but fluttered off gayly.

Make Date
Promises to Meet Barry His First Night Off

Janina sat opposite [illegible] Chickie wondered if she had heard. A little before five she [illegible] and her papers put them [illegible] and walked in the wide [illegible] hall.

"What's your hurry?" Janina drawled.

"Let's hurry," she said to him without greeting. "I don't want Janina to see us."

Surreptitious like! Say, this has been the darndest longest day! They cut down through the alley. "You never looked over once this morning."

"I couldn't."

"Why? Did Janina make it hot for you?"

"No! I should care about Janina!"

"Good for you. Listen! I have to work tonight and tomorrow but how about Wednesday night?"

"I don't know. What about it?"

"Oh, a show or if it stays nice we might have a long ride. Will you? Don't give me a dark look, girl. I'll be good."

"All right then."

He held her hand a moment and looking square at her pursed his lips. She blushed.

"Tuesday at noon Janina came up and put her arm about Chickie with her old affection. "Don't be sore any longer, Chickie. I'll forget it if you will. Let me come to lunch with you."

When they were sitting at the table Janina leaned over and said sweetly: "So Red liked to-ing spirited off." Don't get up-stage, Chickie. I saw you lovey-dovey down the alley. I guess it's just as well. He's more your sort than Jake . . ."

Meets Jake
Gets Into His Machine Out of Downpour

"You jump at things, Janina."

"It's all right as long as it's only me. But if Jake thought that you and Red put up the deal on him well, I'd watch out if I were you."

The day turned cloudy, a brisk rain falling. Toward evening it turned into a gray soaking downpour. Chickie had no umbrella. She hurried up Pine street. Near Broadway a machine, a dark red sedan, swerved sharply, drew up at the curb, stopped.

"I can't, Mr. Munson. I can't."

"Quicker than the street cars, Chickie. You're getting soaked—so am I."

She cast a hurried glance down the block, saw Janina and Connie Smith coming toward them. Jake saw that too, saw the pang of misery in her eyes.

"Quick—get in!"

She let him rush her to the machine. They dashed around the corner. He stopped the engine, gave her a quick triumphant glance, took out his handkerchief and wiped the thick glossy hair.

"Well," he said, melodramatic aren't we? Didn't mean to haul it off high-handed like that, but I was a bit afraid to phone."

He ended abruptly: "You're coming to dinner with me, Chickie."

She sat quiet in the midst of a clashing inner excitement. Jake's black eyes and his red, smiling mouth turned to her expectantly.

"You will, Chickie?"

"No!"

"Yes—listen, you owe this much to me. There are a good many things I have to say to you. You owe me at least a chance to square myself. Do you think you treated me exactly right?"

"Maybe not."

Chickie Consents
Agrees to Have Dinner With Munson

"Well, you didn't." A faint smile touched his lips. The poise of this little slim thing sitting there entirely quiet and he, Jake, who could have had any of a dozen girls pleading with her. "You didn't, and I want to tell you why. I have a lot to say and since you and I are going to be friends—"

"Oh, yes, we are. You might as well hear it now."

"I'm expected home for dinner."

"Well, 'phone and tell them we're dining uptown . . . I'll bring you home early . . . any time you say . . . please, Chickie."

His face took on a vivid earnestness, and when he saw her eyes brightening and a flush spreading swiftly over her soft cheeks he reached down and pressed her hands.

"That's not much to ask. Why any other girl would have written a note . . . she would at least have explained. . . don't you think so, Chickie?"

"I have thought of that. I really felt very sorry over it all."

"Then you tell me about it. We'll have a quiet bite. It's a go? You dear."

She put on her gloves slowly, her hands moist, her heart rushing. From the corner of her eye she stole a glimpse at his bent head, the rich vital color of his face. Her inward excitement mounted.

"The Ritz, how's that?" Something tasty . . ."

"Anywhere."

He gave her a kind chuckling look. "See here, Chickie, don't be so indifferent. Any one would think you were swept off your feet every day in the year."

But she was merely uncertain, agitated, not sure what excuse to make when she phoned. She saw Jennie taking the knife and fork from the table, making hasty, tremulous excuses to Jonathan, then the two of them sitting down, silent, oppressed. Well—she would say she had to work, easiest way, they couldn't object to that.

But when she went to the phone she couldn't bring the lie out. She said in a fluttered, strained tone: "Hello, Jennie, dear. Well, Jennie, Mr. Munson wants me to have dinner with him. Is that all right with you?"

Why, Chickie, no! Your father expects you."

"I'll be home early, by nine surely. You see I have to stay over. It's on business. Now, you tell him that, please, mother darling."

DAILY TRUE STORY

Say It With Glances

A HURDY GURDY was playing "Drink to me only with thine eyes."

I was walking in Central Park with my good friend, Dr. Waring.

We had paused at a park entrance to admire a saddle horse. The air to which the beloved old air. Doc smiled at me.

"Wonder what the parts who wrote the lyrics for that melody had turned it in, I suppose he was pleased with himself," Doc remarked.

"A bit moldy. Pretty sentiment."

"One speaks better with the eyes than with words. Or with glances that say words."

"What prompted that up Doc?"

"Just shows how something quite foreign to a main theme will lead one to go around to it. For example, I hear this air. I think of the words. I decide that I'd always prefer drink to you in beer with the eyes. Then one of those things my mind does. My mind passed and looked at his watch.

"Did you ever see a young man in love?"

"Speaking of eyes you jump to some poor young sap suffering with that biological urge called love. Doc."

"I was thinking of a handsome chap who's very much in love. About this time of day he usually is to be found by the Shakespeare garden. Let's stroll over and see if he is there."

I consented. Doc Waring is a queer chap. He's full of book learning to be sure but he's also full of the study of mankind. He likes to watch people and study them to come to conclusions with amazing results about what sort of people they are.

We walked over toward the Shakespeare garden.

"Now a young man this chap I have mentioned and many other eloquent eyes he has

Military-Looking Youth

If another man had said this it would have angered me but with Doc it was different. He wasn't taking over a pair of wall-eyes like any knowledge he had been studying them.

"There he is now. Walks like a West Pointer doesn't he?"

I looked in the direction of Doc's gaze and saw an upstanding healthy young man of anywhere from 20 to 25. He was correctly dressed did carry himself with a sort of military air and paused at a bench near the quaint park garden.

After glancing about he produced a pocket sized volume and proceeded to read.

Doc led me to a bench and we sat down and lighted smokes.

"What's he reading?" I asked. "And is he the young man you believe to be in love?"

"Can't say what he is reading today. Some days ago I passed near enough to see that it was Tennyson and of course I believe he is in love. I know it."

That made me laugh.

"Clever Sherlock. You find a healthy manly chap reading Tennyson, one of the mushiest of our alleged famous poets and you deduce that he is in love. If you found me reading Einstein you'd deduce that I was a scientist."

"Wait, don't embarrass him by staring and you may see why I say the young man is in love. It depends on whether she comes along."

"She?" I asked. "More uncanny stuff. The young man is in love and you deduce that it is a she."

"You are always interesting," Doc said to me, "but least interesting when you try to be humorous. If the—" He paused to nudge me. "Here she comes—he's seen her already."

A pretty girl amazingly pretty and wholesome was slowly approaching with an elderly lady. The girl's eyes were darting glances ahead. I glanced around to our young man in love. His eyes sparkled, his color mounted. He placed the book in his lap and looked at the approaching girl.

"There, see what I mean?" Doc whispered.

I did see. The young man was appealing to her with his eyes. From the way he looked at her, with his soul in his eyes—he was telling as plainly as if he had hopped on the bench and shouted it—that he loved her.

The beautiful girl looked at him. There is a great difference between just staring and looking. The girl's color deepened in her lovely cheeks. She glanced at him and then glanced down.

Eyes Speak Love

The young man had arisen. He stood as if half ready to salute, or to kneel at her feet. If ever human eyes spoke silently, wordlessly, of love, his did.

The girl and her elderly companion walked past. The alert young man turned to watch her. The girl seemed to slow up, she looked back at him and then flashed a smile. After that she lowered her glance with true maidenly modesty. The young man in love watched until she disappeared around a curve in the path. His military bearing seemed to relax then. He sat down slowly, opened his small book and began to read. Every now and then he would look up and then down the path whence the beautiful girl had disappeared.

"I like that youngster. I'm going to drop down beside him and give him some kindly advice."

"Don't be silly, Doc," I protested.

I saw the doctor turn and smile at him. Then I heard him speak.

"Can you concentrate on reading in a noisy park like this?" Doc asked.

I felt like grinning. The young man did not look toward him at all.

I say," Doc started again, raising his voice which is deep and resonant. Before he had gone further the young man turned and looked directly at him.

Fond of Tennyson?" Doc asked.

The young man smiled and nodded.

Do you prefer his heroics or romances?

And then, to my surprise, the young man produced a small writing pad and wrote on it. Doc read it and instantly his fingers were fluttering.

Young Man a Mute

It was a shock to me. Doc was an expert with the deaf and dumb stuff. He could read lips and he could use the abbreviated sign language the expert mutes use, telling a sentence almost with a few moves of hand and fingers.

Our young man in love was a mute and deaf at that.

I sat there and watched them. Doc was keenly interested. How I wished that I could understand. I intended to make Doc tell me all about it. After a seemingly long while the handsome young man arose with Doc. He assumed his military pose, shook hands and walked away. Doc came over and sat down beside me.

I waited.

Doc lighted a cigar.

"Dashed shame. I couldn't help him," he said.

"Slim chance to restore mutes, Doc."

"I don't mean that—he'll be that way as long as he lives. I mean about his love affair. He's madly in love with the pretty girl. He doesn't know her name or where she lives. He has been seeing her several times a week at this place. They smile at each other. His heart is bursting with love, but he admits he cannot bear to take a chance to approach her. He will have to let her know that he is a mute. He feels that she will regard him with pity or horror, as so many normal fools do regard the mutes and that would be too hard to bear. I couldn't advise him."

"Was that all he said?"

I was feeling queer—I realized the young man's love tragedy.

Happy Chapter

"No. He was interested in me, to know how I happened to become an expert in lip reading. We did more of that than we did of the hand signs, although it is difficult for strangers at first. He gets his military bearing from the school for mutes. He is alone in the world and writes a little, but has an ample income. I explained that as I had specialized on throat and ears I had studied the 'language' of the mutes and lip reading to help me in my work, to enable me to become better acquainted with mutes."

"Did he talk much of the pretty girl?"

"No. He said it was just a little happy chapter in his life that couldn't last, because no girl would marry him, and he would never have courage to let this girl know about him."

"Tough—a real tragedy," I muttered.

"Not being a mute, this particular love-phase seems tragic. I am going to see him again. I have his card. He needs things to interest him, take him out of this love-madness before he becomes despondent."

The Girl

I thought of the handsome young-man-in-love for many days.

Perhaps it was two weeks later that Doc said: "You ought to go with me to tonight's meeting of the Society of the Mute. Being a writer, you will find much there that may come in handy to you. Young Deering is going with me. I am to make a little address."

Deering, I learned, was our "young-man-in-love." Twice since Doc met him I had sneaked into the park and seen him gaze at the pretty girl, almost felt the pangs that must have been his.

I picked up Doc in my car and then this mute, Deering. We went to the meeting. Deaf mutes from all around gather at such meetings, much as "native-staters" do, to get acquainted.

I could only be a silent watcher. I was as much out of their world as they were out of mine. After a while I saw the introductions being made. Doc suddenly pinched my arm.

"For God's sake!" he exclaimed, which was a rare thing for him to say. I looked and behold one of the officials of the society introducing young Deering to a girl. THE GIRL!

She, like Deering, was a mute!

Just as he had feared to let her know he was a mute, so had she feared to let him know. They had been making love with glances without suspecting that both were mutes.

Doc was best man at their wedding.

NOTHING COULD BE CLEARER. THE MOMENT I DISCOVERED PONTOON, LOUIE DECIDED TO BECOME PONTOON'S FAVORITE RELATIVE.
CLARYCE HAS ALWAYS HATED ME BECAUSE I KNEW SHE COULDN'T BOIL EGGS WITHOUT BURNING THEM.
ALSO SHE'S ALWAYS KNOWN THAT I MADE IT MY BUSINESS TO FIND OUT WHY SHE HAD SO MUCH TROUBLE WITH HER FIRST HUSBAND.
WHAT A SITUATION! I DIG UP A HIGH-CLASS RELATIVE AND MY OWN BROTHER KIDNAPS HIM BY CLAIMING THAT WE PRACTICALLY STABBED PONTOON IN THE BACK WITH A DISH OF NOODLES!

If the railroads succeed in their efforts to establish a national Old Home Week, they should prepare ready made conversation slips, like telegraph companies do for their nimble witted patrons.

The conversation should go about like this—

Visitor—Well, well, well.

Home Towner — Well, well, well.

Visitor—You don't look a day older.

Home Towner—You don't look a day older.

WHY PITTSBURGH IS GREAT
Its Rail and Water Communications Are Unsurpassed

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

Washington, Our Father and Leader

The Nation Honors Him. It Should Also HEED HIS ADVICE

WHAT was George Washington?

A complete answer would spread over thousands of pages.

He was a great man, great statesman, great fighter, great builder, far-seeing, courageous, patient.

He was carefully obedient to orders when he took orders. He did not hesitate to disregard established authority, when he believed it was in the wrong.

Let those that preach eternal, servile submission to things as they are, consider Washington's work. The English king and government were legal "owners" of this country, made its laws, laid taxes upon it.

To obey those laws and pay those taxes, was as much the LAW as it is to obey and pay, now.

Washington was officer in the army of King George, sworn to obey his orders, the penalty for disobedience was death.

That meant nothing to Washington, when he knew the king was wrong and the American colonists right.

Above the king's orders, he put the orders of his own intelligence, and conscience.

The king said to the Americans, taxing them heavily "you shall pay, and shall have nothing to say about it."

He under-estimated the character of the colonists, and under-estimated especially the character and staying powers residing in a certain officer named George Washington.

The Bostonians threw overboard the tea on which they were to pay taxes, "without questioning."

The Americans met in Philadelphia and signed Jefferson's Declaration of Independence. British literary gentlemen, thinking they detected some borrowing from a Greek speech called it Rodotomantade, which may be freely translated by our slang expression "guff."

But the declaration still stands, because we had WASHINGTON back of it.

If you ARE anything, if you HAVE anything, if you HOPE for anything in this land, THANK GOD FOR WASHINGTON.

Others "resolved" protested, declared, and said men are created equal, which by the way they are not, within a million miles.

Courage in Washington was as natural as breathing. In 1754 fighting for the English against the French, he, a lieutenant colonel, gained the victory, at Great Meadows. Describing his experience, he wrote "I heard the bullets whistle, and believe me, there is something pleasant in the sound." Many, then and now, would find the sound less pleasant.

Later, under command of a home-born Britisher, Gen. Braddock, Washington witnessed out of date British methods, and wrote plainly his opinion of them, after Braddock was defeated and killed near a part of the Wilderness we now call Pittsburgh.

Of that fight Washington wrote "we have been most scandalously beaten by a trifling body of men * * * the dastardly behavior of those they called regulars exposed all others to almost certain death, and, at last, they ran, as sheep pursued by dogs."

Disregarding the advice of Washington, who was his aide de camp, Braddock engaged the French and their savage Indian allies in the forest, where the Indians fought best.

Braddock, despising the French and Indians, in true British fashion insisted on following regular British methods.

That cost him his life, which did not matter.

Washington, in that battle, got four bullets through his coat. Be grateful that no one of them killed him.

By his will, Washington freed his slaves, of which he had inherited a great number, and wrote "there is not a man living who wishes more sincerely than I do, to see a plan adopted for the abolition of slavery."

That was as "radical" those days, as though you should now advocate abolition of "wage slavery" on a "just enough to keep you alive" basis, substituting universal profit sharing.

Washington's farewell message to the American people warned them TO KEEP OUT OF EUROPEAN ENTANGLEMENTS.

Our government, for the first time, now tends to disregard that advice. There are cracks in the "INDEPENDENCE" established by Washington.

We ask Britain's PERMISSION to build one battleship as big as the British Rodney. And Britain says "NO." We are even now considering a bargain that would pledge this country to defend France against attack by other powers in Europe, which is none of our business.

All that nonsense would surprise Washington. There were fewer than four million Americans alive in his day. We are now 120,000,000 and Rhode Island is worth now 10 times as much as the whole United States was worth, when Washington left office.

To celebrate Washington's Birthday properly, you might telegraph or mail to your Congressman and each of your two United States Senators a message along the following lines:

For your country's sake, for Washington's sake and for God's sake, take Washington's advice and vote to keep this country out of European entanglements of every kind.

Mayor Kline Takes Action At Last in Taxi Strike

(Reprinted from final edition of yesterday's Sun-Telegraph)

After weeks of inactivity, Mayor Kline at last has taken action in the taxicab strike.

It does not seem to be courageous action, but it is a relief to note that he did do something—he ordered the taxicabs off the city streets.

The strike disorder, that caused death and injury, was a disgrace to Pittsburgh. The city police failed utterly to preserve order. In many cases the city officers appeared to encourage the rioters, doubtless remembering the fact that Mayor Kline, during the milk drivers' strike, had reinstated policemen that refused to obey orders to guard company property.

Mayor Kline, in his statement of reasons for ordering removal of taxicabs from the streets, makes points that will appear most plausible to a great many persons.

First of all, it has behind it the purpose of preventing disorder, riot and bloodshed, and that will be considered of higher importance than anything else, even if the actual act of stopping taxicabs, in effect, appears to be a surrender to the disorderly element.

To justify his conclusions the Mayor points out that protection of property, such as a factory, is a far different matter from protecting a moving taxicab in the city streets, which belong, not to the taxicab company, but to the people.

There is some merit to the Mayor's argument. With the present status of the cab strike it is evident that they cannot be operated without force. The point then is, shall that force be permitted and to what extent? To date the show of force represented in guards armed with riot sticks on cabs, and the assemblage of police at various points where trouble might be expected, has not been successful in restoring taxicab service.

Shall the show of force be made greater? Shall the taxicab guards be supplied with arms? That was the point Mayor Kline had to consider. A great many people will say that he showed more wisdom in deciding that there has been no taxicab service whatever and that, rather than make the streets an armed battleground, there should not be any further attempt to show there is such service.

It is an extraordinary decision, but it should be remembered the occasion of it is extraordinary.

It may not be legal, but it appears to be prudent.

It is a humiliating surrender to irresponsible rioters, but not so humiliating as daily flouting of police and unrestrained showers of brickbats.

Now that this extraordinary action has been taken, its only excuse will be a speedy end to the strike.

If Mayor Kline can knock the heads of the two warring forces together and make them listen to reason he will, to some extent at least, justify his order.

Citizenship Rally Part Of Holiday Observance

No better date than Washington's birthday could be selected for the holding of a citizenship rally, such as will be held in the Soldiers' Memorial tonight under the auspices of the American Citizenship League. And it certainly is appropriate that observance of the holiday should be in part marked by exercises pertaining to citizenship work carried on among foreign-born residents interested in preparing themselves to attain the ideals of American citizenship.

Robe Carl White, assistant secretary of labor in charge of the Bureau of Immigration and Bureau of Naturalization, as the principal speaker, will add national government sponsorship to this Washington's birthday celebration by those who have come to our shores from abroad.

The American Citizenship League is to be commended for its worthy work and to be congratulated upon the fact that it appears to be very effective, this being the third annual rally of this nature. It maintains eight citizenship schools and 45 additional centers where citizenship work is carried on. Its work is most practical and valuable.

THE campaign to abolish the jury system is indicative of our patriotic desire to abolish everything.

The present jury arrangement is culled from the English law and dates back to Alfred the Great. Which is further back than ox-tail soup.

"Bugs" Baer

The ancient juries consisted of 12 good men who knew all about the case. They knew the litigants, the facts and the business involved.

You couldn't get on one of Alfred's juries unless you knew something.

Now you cannot get on a jury if you know anything.

If you admit you know one of the contestants the judge parts your hair with a gavel.

If you surrender, after bitter cross-examination by the defense, and confess that you read the daily newspapers, the prosecuting attorney gives you three months in the jailhouse to dumb yourself up.

If you sadly boast that you are capable of forming an opinion, you are guilty of cranial misdemeanor which involves a term of office and a fine of three streetcar tokens.

The law seems to think that juries are having too much fun sampling bootlegging evidence.

ADVENTURES OF A GERM

By Herbert Kaufman

IN the year 100,000,000 B. C.—maybe an aeon or two earlier or later—a tiny amphibian crawled out of the virginal oozes and began to warm its sluggish blood in the primordial dawn.

No one is quite sure what this vague, rudimentary thing looked like, or can classify, to a certainty, the elemental germ of life from which it developed, in the experimental laboratory down there among the yeasting muds, where nature had just begun to condense and combine the vital forces from which all self-perpetuating species were to descend.

The abysmally stupid creature was utterly deaf, sightless and entirely devoid of acute sensations.

Its brain was barely large enough to house breathing and feeding instincts. It had heart and lungs of sorts and a digestive system scarcely capable of eliminating fuel and nutritive essences.

And that was the founder of your race.

IN February, 1930, the carefully cultivated seed of this dim organism is tearing planets apart, splitting atoms into millionths, snipping continents in half and scooting about the heavens on home-made wings.

The brainpan that wasn't roomy enough to hold a pain throb or a recognizable hunger, is now a factory from which hundred-story skyscrapers, submarines, Hudson tunnels, philosophies, arts, trip hammers and locomotives pour in helter-skelter procession.

One of the corpuscles, that set out on its hundred-million-year journey on the morning we mention, eventually settled in a little Michigan town and evolved into an Edison.

Another, steadily collecting intelligence and accumuating constructive curiosity in Neandertha caves, jungle wattes, Tartar yurts, Arab tents, shepherd huts, Athenian academies and Roman temples, finally lands in the veins of an electrical engineer, and enables him to identify elements still beyond microscope vision and physical contact.

A THIRD of those same corpuscles, after traveling in the footsteps of the brontosaur, the eohippus, past Nineveh and along the trails of Nebuchadezzar, Xerxes, Alaric and Saladin, embarks for America and yields, as the fruit of its venerable investigations, a light ray to estimate the thickness of paper to an electron breadth.

And a fourth, wandering through Heaven knows what ethnological routes, winds up in Schenectady to enter service in the wizard den there, and confide to E. F. Alexanderson how to radio an identifiable image to Melbourne, Australia, once twenty thousand miles away, but now, by grace of successful television, one-eighth of a second distant.

But something seems to have happened, lately, to the PARTICULAR bit of gray matter delegated to provide solutions for the tangles into which human nature invariably snarls itself when economic and political opinion undertake to find common denominators.

THE drys and wets were never more at loggerheads. The President can't convince the tariff makers that national expediency requires prompt and decisive action on uncompleted schedules.

All attempts to bring order out of New York's confusion of criminal laws are frustrated by legislative partisanship.

The House Judiciary Committee simply won't render conclusive reports on the Wickersham Committee recommendations.

Europe is again headed for indefinite messes; the Tardieu Cabinet is out and Doumergue is at wit's end where to find materials for an effective successor; the Soviets have declared war on all formal religion, and it will take a sharper sword than Alexander's to cut through the involved knot into which naval disarmament suddenly discovers itself.

Nothing seems impossible except a composition of the selfish differences, which have consistently defeated society's ambition to live under the rule of reason, and make the best use of its opportunities and talents.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

EVIDENTLY, we have here in the fern an alternation of generations, like the alternation that we noticed in the liver-fluke. The fern plant produces spores; the spore grows into a prothrallus; the prothallus produces spermatozoa and ova; the fertilized ovum grows into a fern plant, and so on.

We may note that there is no very definite purpose in this arrangement, as far as can be ascertained; it is not in any sense better than the arrangement seen in the higher plants.

H. G. Wells

It is an arrangement that becomes intelligible, as we shall learn, from the evolutionary point of view; the ferns, like the amphibians, are transitional forms, caught in the act of passing from one style of existence to another.

Like the amphibia, the ferns cannot get far away from wetness. They have not fully attained the dry land.

There are one or two other kinds of plants that show a similar life-history. The horsetails bear their spores on erect cones, and here again the spore develops into a sexual prothallus.

As with the ferns, our temperate zone horse-tails are by no means the most impressive; there are tropical species that reach a height of 30 feet, and at one time gigantic tree-like horse-tails were a conspicuous feature of the world's vegetation.

The curious "clubmosses" do have the same cycle of reproduction. These plants are classified together as the Pteridophyta, which means "fern-like plants."

There are a number of plants that exhibit a similar alternation of generations, but with the emphasis on a different stage in the cycle. There is no need for us to describe in detail the appearance of the little tussocks of various species of moss that are found growing on walls and stones, on the boles of trees, in squelchy bogs and on the hard ungenerous faces of cliffs—indeed, almost anywhere we care to look.

The structures that especially concern us are the delicate, graceful rods with tiny globular or oval capsules perched on their upper ends that may often be found rising from moss-plants, for the capsules are full, when they are ripe, of a dust of barely visible spores.

The whole apparatus, stalk and capsule, is called a sporogonium, or spore-generator.

The spores are shed from the sporogonium and are blown about, much as they are in ferns. When they germinate they give rise at first to protonema—a branching feltwork of extremely delicate green threads having no very definite arrangement.

This elementary, groping web is moss-tissue feeling about, so to speak, for the best and most comfortable situation in which to settle down. Here and there the protonema strikes lucky and throws special branches, some up into the air, others down into the soil; the former become stems and leaves of a primitive kind and the latter become simple rootlets.

In this way the protonema gives rise to several mossplants, after which it dies, and its offshoots, the mossplants, lose their organic connection with each other; they become discreet and separate things although they originated as parts of the same living body.

So the moss as we know it is formed with simple roots and stems and leaves, and proceeds to live on water and salts and air and light in the manner that we have already described.

After a time this moss-plant develops sexual organs, very like the sexual organs of a fern prothallus and quite unlike the flowers of a phanerogam. They appear in tiny clusters at the ends of the main stem or of its branches.

As with the prothallus there are male organs producing active spermatozoa and female organs shaped like tiny flasks, with necks down which the spermatozoa swim to the waiting egg-cells.

Then the fertilized egg-cell, like the egg-cell of a fern and unlike the egg-cell of a flowering plant, does not become part of a hard seed but begins to grow and develop at once.

It grows into the stalk and capsule that we have already noted—the sporogonium. It gives rise to this mass of tissue that sprouts up parasitically from the moss plant, sucking nourishment from it, but which is, nevertheless, not a branch but a child of that plant.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—New York has an official spotter whose job is to ferret out bogus titles drifting from Europe from time to time to dupe the gullible. So pronounced is the metropolitan celebrity complex that innumerable sly rascals have found it a paradise.

They easily run up enormous hotel bills, secure charge accounts and are in demand for the most exclusive formal dinners. At the opening of the opera this season one international hand-kisser occupied a society matron's box. He was recognized by a society reporter who tipped her off.

About all required for the faking noble to make the social grade are a monocle, a crested calling card and a few spurious war decorations. In almost every instance their process is to ingratiate themselves by flattery, make a quick touch and vanish. They know victims will never squeal.

A Scotland Yard chief, who has long handled royal dupes in England and on the continent, on a recent visit, declared there were more than 100 driven out of Europe who were now moving in Social Register circles in New York without slightest suspicion.

The official spotter is employed sub rosa by the city. When there is a doubt over actual identity of some new arrival he is called in. An expert linguist and a wide traveler, he has frequently been placed on various official reception committees.

His formula is simple. He claims to be a native of the land of the suspect and being able to speak the language, poses as an old acquaintance. If the visitor is a charlatan he never denies having known the spotter in his own country. Three have been trapped in this fashion.

So easy is the nobility racket that the clerk of a small Texas hotel was 10 years ago feted as an English lord. More than half a dozen have at various times been suddenly asked to resign from exclusive clubs when they were found flying under false colors.

In a smart, and that's the last of that word smart for this season, Park avenue cafe waiters wear a small blue button in their evening coat lapel to distinguish them from patrons. It would appear waiters after all have some pride.

A block in East Fifty-fourth street is reputed to be the hideaway for 30 speakeasies. One building houses six on various floors. A harrassed home owner had so many raps on his door he has placed a sign on it reading: "This is a private house."

A speakeasy in the section is celebrated for furnishing co-respondent girls in divorce cases. The charge is $10. The proprietor exacts a $25 fee for arranging details. The business has become so prosperous several of the girls average $100 a week.
